BOLD BURGLARY.

A Watchman Overpowered and Gagged by Masked Burglars.

The Daring Deed of Three Chicago Crooks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 24.—A bold and singularly successful robbery was perpetrated last night in the office of the Union Iron and Steel Co., near Thirty-second street. This location is a very desolate one, and except when lighted up by the glare from the mills in the neighborhood of the office, is in total darkness. It was in this condition last night when three men rapped on the door and were admitted by the watchman. They immediately overpowered him, bound, gagged and blindfolded him, and proceeded to blow open the safe. This feat they accomplished in about two hours' time and abstracted about $10,000 in cash. One thousand was in five dollar gold pieces, about $150 in silver coin and the remainder of the ten thousand was in bills done up in envelopes ready to be paid to the employes of the company to-day. The watchman, Charles Brooks, says when the safe door was blown off, the explosion was like that of a large fire cracker. His first story was that the office door was forced open by the three men, but when the locks were found intact, and no signs of violence anywhere except on the safe, he altered his story somewhat. The strangers, if strangers they were, for the police qualify the statement with an "if," treated the aged watchman very considerately, his clothing not being in the slightest degree disordered or torn. Even his collar and necktie, when the handkerchief was removed by the police, whose attention he finally attracted by his cries, were in perfect order. There are no traces of the robbers.

Another Account.

CHICAGO, January 24.—One of the boldest and most successful burglaries ever planned and executed in this city occurred about 7 o'clock last evening at the office of the South Chicago Iron and Steel Works on Ashland avenue, near Thirtieth street, but was not reported by the police until 2 o'clock this morning. It was then learned that three masked burglars had forced the office door, bound and gagged the janitor, Charles Brooks, and while one of them stood guard over him with a pistol, the others drilled a hole in the safe, blew open the combination and bidding the old watchman a cheerful good-night, left taking $1,000 in five dollar gold pieces and $150 in coin together with about $9,000 in bills done in up in envelopes ready for paying the help to-day. The above facts are given by Brooks, but the police regarded something about the affair as sufficiently suspicious to implicate him and have accordingly arrested him and his son. He told somewhat contradictory stories, his unruffled clothes and unprepossessing appearance raised doubts of his accuracy and integrity. Paddy Cavanaugh, a notorious character, was also arrested.

The Walking Match.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 24.—The American Institute was crowded at a comparatively early hour last night by an audience anxiously waiting for midnight and the opening of the great walking match. At five minutes of 12 Lacouse, of Boston, appeared on the track, and was heartily cheered. The others quickly followed suit, and as Krohne, Howard, the colored man Pegram, the veterans Harriman, Ben Curran and Campana were recognized, the building rang with cheers The men were formed in lines of three in front of the Judges. At 12 o'clock the word go was given by Referee Curtis, and the commencement of the long tramp was effected. With a bound the men started around the track, the new men mostly at the top of their speed, and the more experienced men at a steady gait. The veteran, Krohne, from the start settled down to his steady, swinging stride, which at the end of his previous contests secured for him part of the gate-money. He made the first mile in eight minutes, when, glancing at his score, he broke into a trot, which he continued for several laps. Contrary to expectation George Barbour made the first mile in six minutes twenty seconds, Hughes and Pat Fitzgerald following him closely. Elson Coughlin Vint, the Brooklyn Midget, also being well up with the leaders. Hughes made the first 6 miles in 40 minutes 15 seconds. The others followed in the same order as before.

IN THE LEAD.

LONDON, January 24.—In the pedestrian contest for the O'Leary International Belt, Albert, of Philadelphia, completed the fiftieth mile at 5:40 a. m., and was much applauded. At 11 o'clock R. Moore had taken the second place from Vint, and was less than a mile behind Albert, who had made sixty-eight and five-eighths miles. Moore is a favorite in the betting.

The Tennessee Senatorship.

NASHVILLE, January 24.—The Republicans held a caucus this morning to select a candidate for whom they would cast their votes today, but reached no result. Harrison was most talked of. Before proceeding to the twenty-first ballot, the name of Gen. B. Bate was withdrawn. Twenty-first Ballot—Maynard, 3; Bailey, 13; Harrison, 40; Bright, 33; R. L. Taylor, 6; Rose, 3; Smith, of Shelby, 1; Jackson, 1; Muse, 2.

TWENTY-SECOND BALLOT.

Maynard, 2; Harrison, 40; Bright, 33; Taylor, 5; W. M. Smith, 1; Bailey, 11; Rose, 2; W. Y. C. Humes, 1; Muse, 1; Etheridge, 1.

The convention took a recess until 2:30.

An Unlucky Bark.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, January 24.—A report from Sandy Hook yesterday states the bark Souvenir, which sailed from here January 10 to continue her voyage to Queenstown, had returned to port owing to the mutiny of the crew. Nothing further could be learned, as the vessel didn't come up to the city. The Souvenir voyage thus far has been unfortunate. She sailed from Baltimore to Queenstown January 1 and no sooner passed out of Chesapeake Bay than she encountered a severe gale. At 8 a. m. the following day a heavy sea broke over the vessel carrying away the boat and part of the stern and swept Capt. Ashland overboard. Every effort was made to save the Captain, whose wife and young child were on board, but without success. The vessel reached this port in distress January 7, and after repairs sailed again last Wednesday.

The Cincinnati Southern.

CINCINNATI, January 24.—A company of capitalists are about to organize to lease the Cincinnati Southern Railroad. The plan is to have a capital of $6,000,000, to lease the road ninety-nine years, renewable forever, paying out of the first profits four per cent on the stock and four per cent on the city's investment of $18,000,000. If there is an excess of the net earnings, it shall be divided between the stock-holders and the city pro rata until the city's portion reaches seven per cent on $18,000,000, when the surplus shall be divided equally. It is proposed if this is accomplished to form a combination or pooling arrangement with the Kentucky Central, Chesapeake and Ohio and Erlanger lines from Chattanooga.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 24.—W. J. McAlpine, of the Enquirer, has written a paper in criticism of the proposed Panama ship canal, in which he asserts positively his belief that the scheme is impracticable and impossible of realization and gives reasons for his belief. FORTUNE-TELLING.

Astrologers, Soothsayers, Clairvoyants and Sibyls of the Future Great.

Keepers of Assignation Houses and Even Worse in Disguise.

A Dangerous Calling Licensed by the City Authorities.

Which Feeds Upon the Ignorance, Incredulity, Vice and Crime of the City.

A Case in Which an Oracle Offers to Have an Abortion Committed.

Startling Revelations of the Doings of Taxed and Licensed Professional Prophets.

"The fault, friend Brutus, is not in ourselves,
But in our stars, that we are underlings."

So said Cassius. The ancients cut open chickens to get omens. A perverse and adulterous generation wanted a sign in the time of the Man of Galilee. Probably if the record had been kept it would be known that Eve looked over her shoulder to see the moon before she told Adam to climb the tree for the forbidden fruit. Nobody will quarrel with the claim of fortune telling to antiquity. It is a rather extensive field—this dealing with future events—reaching as it does from the science of planetary influence, which to a degree everybody believes in, down to the consultation of the shaken coffee grounds or tea leaves, which nobody has any faith in. It isn't the province of this sketch to enter the field with a view of giving a history of fortune telling, or with a view of producing an elaborate disquisition on its numerous phases. Within a year the city of St. Louis in a legislative and corporate capacity has recognized fortune telling as a legitimate avocation. An ordinance has been put into effect, by which, on the payment of a license, the fortune-teller is given official respectability and standing in the community. This license is a considerable sum—$100 a year. Its effect has been to close out probably three-fourths of the soothsayers and leaves a dozen reaping the benefits of round prices and decreased competition.

As to whether fortune-telling should be legitimatized and licensed, as is the case at present, the public can determine better after reading what is given below. The moral investigators of the POST-DISPATCH have visited the licensed practitioners and what was seen and heard is faithfully reported.

It may be said at the outset that the attitude of the municipal corporation toward the fortune-tellers is untenable. If their calling be a legitimate one in the moral acceptation of the term the city has no more legal right to impose a tax or license than upon the lawyers and doctors, that latter issue being already decided by the Supreme Court of Missouri. If fortune-telling is an illegitimate profession, a fraud and a snare to the public, then the same arguments used against licensing the social evil, gambling or any other vice apply with equal force to this.

The ordinance which imposes a tax of $100 a year on fortune tellers is part of the rather extensive license legislation which followed the putting into effect of the scheme and charter. That instrument framed by freeholders was beyond dispute a measure in the interest of the freeholders. When it went into operation it limited the revenue to be derived from realty, and prompted a policy of imposing license taxes on pretty much all the avocations and professions, to make up the necessary municipal income. The legal and medical fraternity came within the provisions and at once made a test of the law. It was taken to the highest court, which decided the tax on talent to be unconstitutional. This checked the omnivorous designs of the City Hall tax-eaters. They had, however, fixed the fortune-tellers and there was a section pending to make the clergy pay for the privilege of preaching the gospel. In fact, the tariff was to be laid upon everybody in one form or another, and even the humble reporter might not have escaped the comprehensive grasp of the license legislator but for the grounds taken by the Supreme Court.

DR. J. K. ALLEON.

"Dr. J. K. Alleon, M. D.," is engraved on the door-plate of an unpretentious but comfortable residence on Tenth street, half a block north of Franklin avenue. The reporter was ushered back into a kind of arcanum—a dark room with a railing across it, and a gas jet dimly burning. Along the sides of the room were shelves well filled with drugs and chemicals. In one corner was a large cabinet, in which the Doctor was at the time engaged in compounding some mysterious medicine. He came out clothed in a tight skull-cap and wearing a long black gown girded at the loins. With his long, flowing beard and unusual garb he called to mind some alchemist of ancient times pondering over secrets in his laboratory. Taking a seat near the visitor but within the railing he talked in well-chosen and ready words of his science. Conversation turned upon the law and what the astrologer thought of its effects.

"It is undoubtedly an imposition," he said, "and if a test case was made there is not the slightest doubt that the courts would upset the ordinance. I offered to join with others of the profession in fighting the law, but they were slow in raising a fund to carry the case through the courts, and the matter was dropped. The effects of the ordinance, illegal as it undoubtedly is, are good. I think. It has ruled out of the profession a class of fortune-tellers who used it simply as a cover for nefarious practices. There were numerous fortune-tellers who fumbled the cards and rattled off some nonsense, winding up with a suggestion of an assignation to the sitter. They used their business to corrupt morals and to bring men and women into close relations. This was their business. The fortune-telling was a cloak. For example, suppose you were to go to one of that class. She would shuffle her cards, carry on a conversation, make some nonsensical predictions, and wind up by saying, 'Now, wouldn't you like meet some real nice lady that's fond of pleasure?' To have such people in the profession was an injury to all of us."

"You evidently deal with the science of astrology?" remarked the visitor, with a glance at a representation of the planetary system.

"Yes, I have nothing to do with this card or coffee ground business. I am a graduate of medicine and a graduate of astrology; I am furthermore in a direct genealogical line from William Lilly, the great astrologer of the Sixteenth century."

The conversation was turned upon the variety of purposes which prompts people to consult the astrologer, and to illustrate this he told of one mining capatalist of, Webb City, who had paid him $1,500 for "pointers" on his mining operations.

In further satisfaction of reportorial curiosity the doctor showed the working of the principles of his science. He takes the date of birth of the applicant for advice and casts a nativity which is a rather intricate astronomical problem, being the adjustment of the planetary system to the date given. The relations of the system are then calculated for the date of the visit and also for the date of the matter respecting which information is desired. To these data are applied the astrological formula and the forecast is given, the outcome of a mathematical problem.

"Astrology is a science," said the doctor after he had illustrated the operation of the principles. "It is the mother of astromy. All scientific men recognize the principles of astrology. The astrologist is one who has taken up the principles of the science and carried them out to achieve results. It can be taught. I myself have had apt pupils and there are colleges for instruction in it. People wonder why I bring them into this dark room. That has nothing to do with the science of astrology. I have drugs and chemicals," and the astrologer glanced at the well-filled shelves, "which must be kept from the day-light. I practice medicine with astrology, and in my course of treatment there is no empiricism. I do not have to put my patients through a course of experimental physic to find out what will do them good. I determine the planetary influence under which the person was born, and the planetary influence under which the disease is aggravated. With these determined I know from my astrological formulæ just what the treatment should be. The laws of life and health I figure out as definitely and certainly as you would the interest on a mortgage. There is no business on which I can not give information and a forecast. I could show you thousands of references, but business men who come to me do so in confidence. They say they believe in the science, but by reason of the world's prejudice they don't want it known."

There is no ailment that human flesh is heir to, no occupation known to man to which the Doctor does not apply his science. He does more than this—he dares to set himself up as an oracle in love affairs. To use his own words, he has "the secret of winning (for any one who may wish) the sincere and unchanging affection of any one of the opposite sex whose love may be desired. One lady confessed to me that she had fervently loved a man with all her heart's deep devotion for thirteen years, and during all that time he was ignorant of her love, and did not even know her name. She secured my services, and in three months the man proposed, and it is safe to say there is not a happier wedded couple than they two."

This secret, the discovery of which cost the astrologer many years of toil and study, he told the reporter should never be made known till his death. He declares it to be infallible in its work.

"I have never failed," he said to the reporter, "in a single instance to accomplish the desire result for those who have availed themselves of my mysterious help in love affairs. I have refused repeatedly the most tempting offers of money to relinquish and give a quit-claim of this discovery for the exclusive use of several noted men, being doubtful of their honor and purity of purpose. The motives which actuated me in arriving at absolute perfection in this art was not simply to discover the lost mystery of psychomancy, psychologic fascination and conjuration practiced by the ancients by the aid of which Cleopatra, Charmion, Semiramis and other lewd Egyptians, Assyrians, Abyssinians and Orientals lured Emperors from their thrones and made Kings their slaves; but it was also the nobler, higher one of benefiting mankind, conferring happiness and preventing the heart-sick sorrow of unrequited hopeless love."

MADAME EHRLICH.

The iron rod projects over the doorway, but the sign is no longer there, informing the passer-by that Madame Ehrlich tells fortunes. She has been one of the oldest of the fortune-tellers of St. Louis, using the cards to make known the future to her patrons.

"I have stopped," she said to the reporter who called. "They want me to pay $100 a year and I won't do it. In my seventeen years of fortune-telling in St. Louis I have saved some money and I am not obliged to continue. Mr. Rosenblatt seems to think I am not in earnest in my intentions and he has had me brought before the Police Court among all the thieves and harlots six times for not paying the license, but I am out of the business and he could nothing. Detectives have been sent here but I tell no fortunes for anybody, and so they have failed to catch me."

"You must have gained considerable knowledge of men and women in your experience, Madame? I should like to hear you tell something of the past, if not of the future?"

The Madame laughed.

"Yes, I have come to understand human nature pretty well. Men and women both when they come to the fortune-teller are very free in their talk. I have learned to read faces. It isn't necessary to have more than a glance at a man's or a woman's face to know their secret thoughts. My experience is that the most of those who come to have their fortunes told want to know something about lovers—those they have or those they want to get. It is a business to make one lose faith in the virtue of either sex. How many hundreds of women have I had tell me of their tricks to deceive men, either their husbands or their lovers."

"I trust you have obtained a better impression of my sex, Madame," modestly suggested the reporter.

"The men!—ugh!" and the madame shrugged her shoulders, "they are inconstant and glory in it, but they are such fools, imagining that they make conquests with women who are deeper in intrigue than they are, and who simply laugh at them."

"You have retired from the profession."

"I have for the present. I shall pay no $100 license. Perhaps after a time we shall have another collector, a different man from Mr. Rosenblatt: then I may hang out my sign. Auf Wiedersehen."

MADAME CAMILLE ST. JOHN.

"Bon jour, Madame! Comment vous portez vous, Madame!" rehearsed the reporter as he rang the bell underneath the sign of Madame Camille St. John on South Fifth street. Here will be fortune telling attended with all the finesse of a French woman, was the mental comment as the echo of the bell was listened to. A few moments later found the reporter sitting vis-a-vis in a well-kept little parlor with a prepossessing young woman who smiled pleasantly upon the visitor and, saying she was from Tennesse instead of Paree, bade him in effect to "wrestle with the vernacular."

Madame St. John is young and fresh looking, with large luminous eyes. She is gifted with a degree of natural clairvoyant power, has studied palmistry to considerable effect, and, eschewing all mystery, talks with American frankness and tact. To confirm her Tennessee origin she says "kin" and "agin." Would she mind talking about her business? Certainly not, it has its pleasant features as well as its disagreeable ones. Of the latter the freedom which male visitors insist upon is, perhaps, the most objectionable. They want to shake hands when they go away, and perhaps something more. They ask the fortune-teller if she "receives visitors," with a meaning emphasis, and when she says she doesn't except on professional business, they want to know if she doesn't keep a room or two to let out, and if she doesn't know some nice lady with whom she could make them acquainted. When she tells them she is not in that kind of business they look incredulous.

"Now that isn't at all pleasant," continued Madame St. John. "I have a mother and a crippled sister in Tennessee whom I support, and I aim to do as nearly as I can what is right and proper. My power has been recognized ever since I was a child. The neighbors used to come to the house and I would be called in from play to give advice and information about domestic affairs, things lost, and so on. Ever since I was fifteen I have been "telling fortunes," as the saying goes. I have traveled all over the country, and think I have had considerable success. At any rate, my patrons generally express themselves satisfied. Probably I have no business to complain that some who come here can't understand why I reject their advances, for I'm sorry to say that too many who follow fortune-telling are only too ready to pander to lust. There is Madam Blank (mentioning the name of one of the widest known and best advertised of the class). I am credibly informed that she has a number of girls for whom she makes appointments with men who visit her. I don't say they all do it, but it is unfortunate that this fortune-telling is very often made a blind for assignation purposes."

"Your patrons embrace both sexes?"

"Oh, yes; I have as many gentlemen as ladies that come to see me and they come me on all sorts of business. It is a position in which one can do a great deal of good if one will. Yesterday a gentleman called to know about sinking a shaft on a mining claim and I advised him. Ladies come for advice and information about domestic troubles. It is a good deal harder to tell their fortunes than it is that of a gentleman. The latter has one thing well defined on which he wants light, and when he gets it he goes away. A lady will ask innumerable questions. She wants her fortune told and her sisters, her cousins and her aunts, all at one sitting, and then often she will plead poverty and want to cut down the fee."

The reporter manifested a curiosity for an exhibition of "the Egyptian fortune-telling," and the Madame complied. The palm of the left hand was outstretched, and reading the lines rapidly she declared the possessor to be blessed with a good physical constitution and possessed of considerable magnetic power. [Mem.—No man was ever told by a woman that he possessed magnetism without a feeling of elation.]

"You will live to be sixty years old," continued Madam St. John." You are happily married and I should say your wife has dark hair." A sad shake of the head caused the fortune-teller to tack.

"Well, then you will be married before 1882 and your wife will have dark hair. The prophesy about the baby holds good; it will be a girl."

"Here the revelations became too personal for publication. It is enough to say that the Madame succeeded in making the visitor feel she was doing some pretty close character studying. The cards were brought out, cut and dealt. They corroborated the palmistry, particularly the girl baby part of it.

Dropping the "shop" Madame St. John talks like a clever well-possessed American woman. She says nobody can dispute her possession of clairvoyant powers and that she gives advice and information about business affairs, sickness, journeys, law suits, absent friends, lost or stolen property and often names and describes the prospective bride or bridegroom of the visitor. She makes no pretense of being able to prepare and sell charms as some others of her profession do; nor does she believe that it is necessary to surround her words with an element of mystery. "Indeed" she says "I don't know but I am too frank for this business. Still I get along pretty well at it and I believe I give some people very good advice. This license of $100 is an outrageous thing. I have just paid mine, but it is too much, and what is more, the law should not demand a whole year's pay at once."

MADAM ANNA,

The "fortune teller of the West," announces to an anxious world through the columns of the daily press that her consulting rooms are located opposite the old cathedral on Walnut street, No. [illegible]. The Madam's claim to the title is undoubtedly as clear as the source of her inspirational knowledge. No one has ever entered the courts to dispute it, and, if long residence in one locality gives prestige to professonal practice Madam Anna occupies the solar height of her particular and favored vocation here. For twenty-eight years past the people of St. Louis have been honored by the distinguished presence among them of this empress of fortune-tellers. The madam has during that period resided in one part of town within the radius of the Court-house, and in spite of all the changes which years have wrought upon the neighborhood the "Fortune Teller of the West" clung tenaciously to the blocks around the edifice of the city's patron saint. In the good old steamboating days, when fortune flowed through the streets nearest the river, a professional shingle on Walnut street attracted visitors and v—s. Fortune telling meant monvy and the fees were high. Education had made no strides and credulity was easily practised upon. These were harvesting days for fate agencies. The blindest confidence was reposed in them by all classes. A journey was scarcely undertaken and certainly no important step in business or social life without first consulting the woman of inspiration. Steamboats in time gave place to railroads and hotels up town on the level of Fourth and Fifth streets catered to transient custom, diverting a potent stream of patronage from fortune tellers who, in a measure, were forced to move with the times. Madam Anna took her stand on Fourth street, soliciting the local as well as foreign patronage. After the Southern Hotel fire fortune-telling stock declined in that vicinity, and the construction of the bridge and tunnel turning St. Louis practically into a way-station, fortune-tellers recognized the fact that business could only come henceforth from local sources. The Madam retired to the seclusion of a side-street where her only source of foreign custom was the transient trade of Barnum's Hotel, but she still preserved a penchant for aristocratic clientele and her fees were regulated accordingly. Her latest appeal is made to "business men." The madam occupies the second floor and whole upper portion of an old-fashioned three-story family residence on Walnut, just opposite the Cathedral. A shingle and a lintel-plate adorn the entrance inscribed: "Madame Anna, Business Adviser." On the right side of the door is another sign: "Doctor Ferrier." Here, at least, is a happy combination—medicine and mystery. The doctor's relations to the faculty of fate shall be more clearly defined hereafter.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter passed up the lighted stairway to a door of ancient magnificence, beside which was a solid old bell handle, and a touch of it furnished response in the solemn clang suggestive of a baronial portal. There was a flutter from above, a delicate-looking young Abigail who might have rendered domestic service at Dotheboy's Hall in the Squeers family, slipped down the upper staircase in a shuffling way, holding her apron with one hand and combing her front hair with the fingers of the other: a poor, ill-fed forlorn creature with a dirty face and a worn expression. She cast one nervous glance at the visitor and said, "Do you want to see the madam, sir."

I would like to see her if she is not too much engaged. Probably she is at supper?

"Step inside, please. I will call her down."

The maid ushered the scribe into a large front parlor filled with the furniture of other days. French curtains hung at the windows, settees in the corners; an old arm chair near the stove and a mahogany table in the center. There was a conspicuous absence of bric-a-brac and the surroundings were stiff and gloomy. The back parlor was approached by two folding doors, one of which half opened revealed a dim light; this evidently was the inner sanctum, the consulting cabinet. The girl gave a vigorous poke at the stove to revive the fire and vanished to an upper sphere. A minute later the reporter stood in the awful presence of the woman of mysterious power; two hundred pounds of flesh and blood heavily encased with a forbidding frontispiece and a furrowed record of fifty-five to sixty years. In a broken accent the woman of power from the unseen addressed her visitor:

"You want to have your fortune told?"

"I would like in the first place to know what your charges are."

"Vell, I tell you everytings; de future for three years, $2; for ten years, $4; for twenty years, five dollars; for your whole life, $10. What you say, eh?"

"I think for the present I will take $2 worth. I can come again."

"All who come to see me once come again. Vere is de money?"

"Can you give change?"

"Oh, yes; how much, ten, twenty, fifty, one hundred?"

The Madame was business from the word go and she seemed to have some claim to the title of "business adviser." Producing change for twenty dollars from her dress-pocket she fingered her fee aside and led the way to the inner apartment. A little table was placed against the wall in front of which the Madam took her seat and motioned the scribe to another by her side.

In a small drawer there was a pack of cards which the Madam drew forth, illustrated with mysterious figures back and front, well worn and greasy. Upon the surface of the table a crystal contained a globular stone, and the visitor was told to place the palm of his hand upon it. The Madame added the ponderous weight of her own, and then took a searching optical inventory of her client. The next movement was the shuffling of the cards, from which the reporter was requested to select three. The madam then adjusted her glasses rnd peered into a dirty little volume, from which she gathered her inspired utterances. The scribe was informed that the next three years would bring great changes to his business life; that men whom he trusted now would turn out false; that clouds would hang over his career for a time, but all would come right in the end. The worst period of anxiety and trouble over business affairs would be reached in about six weeks and it might continue for a time. It would only pave the way, however, to bright days and good fortune, smiling prosperity, lots of money, plenty of business and friends on every side. There was a certain lady with dark hair and blue eyes, who would be a good deal of trouble, and who meant no good. she would stand in the way of another lady who was beautiful and good. After a while another lady from abroad would cross the path, and she would go to court and create a scandal, but before the third year closed things would brighten up in every way and marriage and settling down to a quiet, happy life would follow.

At the conclusion of the interview the scribe without disclosing his identity endeavored to draw from the madam some few facts respecting the character and extent of her business, her class of patrons and so forth. It was an ineffectual task, however. The madam was not communicative upon any point save her power to tell of the future. She said that her regular callers had consulted her for years upon every subject that concerns daily life, business, domestic peace or otherwise. They came regularly and always found that her predictions came true. She dwelt somewhat upon the marriage relation and said that she always advised her clients to smooth the surface of tne future by fixing their minds upon some nice girl and getting married. They invariably took her advice and found it to be right. "I tell you," said the madam, with a flourish of her sleeve, "de best business men in St. Louis come to see me, and I treat them well."

"I have no doubt of it. You appear to live comfortably. Are you married, madame."

"Of course I am married; dat is the best life for every one. You cannot prosper without it. Marriage and business go together."

"You seem to thrive upon it, madam. That poor servant girl of yours would be improved if she had a little more to eat, I should think."

That was an unhappy allusion. The madam closed up like an oyster and rustled out of her chair. She impressed upon her visitor the necessity of calling again before the change occurred in his business affairs and held the door for him to make his exit.

Madam Anna is said by the neighbors to have quite an extensive practice among men whose positions in the community would suggest more common sense. Her consultation fees are somewhat beyond the reach of the servant and factory girl element or the poorer and ignorant classes, although she has never been known to turn a dollar away, and is not ashamed to step from her lofty perch to talk to the humbler believers in far-seeing folly. The madame has occasionally taken a trip South upon professional business. Her clients have placed important commissions in her hands such as the selection of a wife or husband. In her private life she is blessed with the counsel, comfort and advice of Dr. Ferriere, a ntty little specimen of French gentility who has an abiding faith in the madame and never loses an opportunity to proclaim her power. The doctor sips his coffee and cognac at a French restaurant close at hand. His professional practice is limited, so limited that the profits scarcely furnish the cognac, but the doctor is happy and he can afford to be so as long as business men flock to the portal of Madam Anna, the inspired adviser.

MADAME AENETTO.

Napoleon used to say, scratch a Russian and you will find a Tartar. Here in St. Louis the apothegm may be paraphrased to, "scratch a fortune teller and you will find an abortionist." No one in the profession advertises so largely as Madame Aenetto, who, every Sunday, obtrudes this notice on the public:

MADAME ÆNETTO, "the wonderful and true fortune-teller and confidential female physician," 1318 N. Eleventh street, between O'Fallon and Cass avenue, can read the real fate of your life from cradle to grave, warns you of bad luck, and guiding you in the way of prosperity; also cures the worst sores and sickness, chronic or acute, of every description.

She is one of the best well known ladies in the profession, her house one of the most respectable looking, and she herself the most successful sybil in the city. Accordingly she was picked out by a reporter as the subject of a little experiment which was a complete success, and which will be a gratifying surprise no doubt to Madame Aenetto, and her 'cousin' when they read the same in to-day's paper. Preparing a letter of a particularly heart-breaking character, and accompanied by a friend the reporter called on the madame just as the shadows of evening were closing in around No. 1318 North Eleventh street. The house is a neat one standing in a row, and the parlor was plainly but neatly furnished. The Madam's cisisbeo came in and ministered to the fire and engaged the couple in friendly converse, while a clatter of dishes in the back room indicated that the Madam was transfiguring a dining-room into a cave of the oracle.

Finally she herself came in, a pleasant looking black eyed woman, not too neatly dressed, and with that jaded, wan look, which is the chief stock in trade of the clairvoyant and the fortune-teller.

"Well, gentleman?" she said."

"This is Madam Aenetto?"

"It is."

"Well, I'll tell you," said the reporter hesitatingly. "There is a lady friend of mine in trouble, and seeing your advertisement, my brother and myself called up here to see if you could help her out of it."

"In trouble?"

"She has been ruined, and as she is engaged to be married you see the necessity for having something done at once."

"Step into the back room with me, please. Probably you would sooner talk to me alone."

The couple walked into the back room and took seats at a little table at one side of the room. "You understand," said the reporter, that I don't want any fortune-telling. If you can't help us—"

"I understand, I understand. Just tell me what you know about the case."

"Well, now, I know very little. This letter will show you as much as I know about it," at the same time handing her the following note:

CAPE GIRARDEAU, January 21.

MY DARLING:—For God's sake, como to me at once— You have ruined me. I knew you would, I knew you would. In a little while my condition will be apparent to my mother. For God's sake, John, take me away from here before my shame is known to the whole world. Take me somewhere where I can rid myself of this intolerable burden.

Your heart-broken
GERTRUDE.

The Madam at once became sympathetic. "The poor thing!" she said, "and you say she is going to be married. Well, I can't blame any woman for wanting to save her good name. I don't think there is any crime in it at all."

"Neither do I. But this is something that I know nothing about. I have no money to throw away, you must understand."

"Well, I know so little about the case that I can't tell you much about it. How far has it gone?"

"I think she has just discovered her condition. You see the importance of something being done at once."

"I have no objection to receiving ladies at my house and taking care of the children afterwards—sending them to an asylum or somewhere—but what you want me to do is something different from that. This is a very dangerous thing to do and I don't like to have anything to do with it. If the case is very recent, and the fœtus very young it would not be so bad. If I could see the young lady I could tell more about her."

"There are too many people who know about this thing now," said the reporter. "I don't propose to bring her until I know just what you are going to do."

"Just wait a minute until I see my cousin—he is a doctor too, you know," and she retired up stairs, whence the sound of muffled voices came, earnestly whispering. She came down and said, "we do not like to take this case, but, where do you live?"

"Here, in St. Louis."

"And your name, please?"

"That can't make any difference to you, I will pay you in advance for everything you do for me."

"Well, we will take the young lady to board here and will find somebody to perform the operation upon her. We could do it ourselves, of course. I know everything about it. I have made it a special study—but it is too risky."

"Who will you get?"

This sudden call for the name of the man of straw disconcerted the lady a little, but she said, "Oh, Dr. Phillips—if I can't find him, I will get some one else. You can make your mind easy about that."

"And now comes the question of expense—what will the operation cost?"

"Forty dollars. If there has to be a second operation, it will be $40 more."

"And tne board?"

"Well, I will be very reasonable with you. You will find nothing to complain of in that. You pay for everything, you say?"

"Yes. How about the danger—isn't this a dangerous operation?"

"It is less dangerous to remove it by instruments than by drugs. If we are lucky it will be all right. The woman, perhaps, will never be able to be a mother but I suppose you do not mind that?"

"How soon can I move her?"

"Not at least for two weeks, and perhaps not for a couple of months that is all luck. You can't tell how it will be, for every woman is different."

"I will have her here on Wednesday next and you will be ready for her?"

"Yes."

JULIANA SCHERER.

In the second story of the new block in front of the Apollo Theater, South Fourth street, No. 608, Madam Juliana Scherer has located her consulting-rooms. For twenty years the dollars of the poor German people living in the south of town have poured into the pocket of this professional licensed fortune-teller. The madame is not prepossessing in appearance. Time has dealt roughly with her but for what she lacks in looks a vivacity of manner compensates. An active little body of fifty-five years with a shawl flung German fashion over her shoulders and wearing huge gold rings in her ears, Madame Scherer presents herself, her own doorkeeper. The POST-DISPATCH reporter was pleasantly ushered into a front room occupied as a consulting room during the day and a bedroom at night. An old-fashioned bedstead, a couch, bureau, table and three chairs made up the furniture of the apartment. Spread upon the bed were some socks and articles suggestive of Saturday linen preparations. The madam sat on one side of the table and the reporter on the other, a box containing three packs of cards between them. The prophetess remarked incidentally that her charge was one dollar and that it covered the whole period of life. After handing over the money the interview commenced. The reporter was assured that he had a bright life in store because he was born in a beautiful month, June. The madam kept her eyes on a book, whose dirty leaves contained a lot of mysterious information in German. It was somewhat dificult to catch the meaning of the inspired lady, for she spoke atrocious English, but enough was gathered to satisfy the scribe that the future would at least be lively for him. Madam Scherer predicted three successive marriages, with a net fruition of fourteen children; a business partnership that would end in a terrific squabble, to settle which both parties would go into court; a loss of money by going on the bond of a public officer, and a variety of pleasant things generally. To atone for all this the reporter was promised a lifetime extending to four-score and ten, and an abundance of wealth in years to come. To reach at all these facts, the Madam shuffled three packs of cards from which her visitor selected three and upon turning up the numbers the information was furnished. The reporter made every effort to appear impressed with the infallibility of every utterance, but it was a severe strain and he breathed a sigh of relief when the lips of the antiquated fortune-teller closed. The interviewing cork-screw process was next applied by the news gatherer, although the subject was a tough one.

"Madam, you are licensed to pursue this calling, I suppose?"

"I pay $100, and I can show you the receipt."

"Is it a money-making business?"

"Not so much as it used to be. When I had rooms near the engine house on Fifth street I made lots of money."

"Who are your customers?"

"All peoples. I tell them what is true and they always come again."

"Do you expect to see me again?"

"Yes. You will come and your frau. Ladies always come to me when they are in trouble."

Among the German women there exists a strong faith in fortune-tellers. People who have been reared in no religious faith whatever cling to superstitions and a fortuneteller possesses an extraordinary power over them. Married women especially rush to the prophetess of the neighborhood to to gather information of events. Young girls drop a dollar for a solution of some love-problem gnawing in their bosoms and the simple men-folk consult the madame upon the prospects of their corner grocery or saloon business.

As the reporter passed down Madam Scherer's stairs, a young, good looking-girl stood in the recess awaiting an interview. She turned her face away, half ashamed of being discovered there, and the scribe was not altogether comfortable in his mind at the idea of being seen in the office of a fortune teller by a member of the gentler sex.

MRS. MARSDEN,

"I guess you are on the wrong track this time, mister," observed a blue-guerns eyed individual of pugilistic appearance to a POST-DISPATCH reporter as he stood halfway up an alley passage way on Seventh street, between Franklin avenue and Wash street.

"I am looking for the office of Mrs. Marsden, my friend. Can you tell me where I shall find her?"

"You won't find her at all. She lives upstairs, but she never sees gentlemen."

"But she tells fortunes, I am told. Why does she object to see gentlemen?"

"She doesn't do that kind of business, I tell you."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? Ha! keep your boots on. I ought to know. She is my mother."

"Well, go up stairs, give my compliments to your mother, and tell her I would like to see her."

"Not much. I tell you, mister, you're on the wrong track. A reporter, I guess."

"You might be mistaken there, In any case your mother will take one man's money as well as another's, I presume."

"Mister, she never sees any men and that settles it. You can call on the Indian fortune teller higher up the block. She advertises in the papers. You can't see Mrs. Marsden."

The eloquence of the stout party aforesaid was of a most persuasive and forcible character, and the reporter regretfully abandoned the idea of discerning the hereafter through the interpretation of Mrs. Marsden.

MADAME E. MONTGOMERY

advertises as the "great European fortune teller," and gives her address as No. 1129 N. Seventh street, between Carr and Biddle streets. She lives in a small dingy brick house, occupying two rooms on the ground floor. The reporter knocked at the door, which was opened by a man of plenteous avoirdupois, in an undress costume of short sleeves and bare feet. He proved to be madame's husband and soon presented that lady. She led the reporter through the parlor into the back room, where, after some weather talk, she inquired why he had called. Did he want his fortune told? Yes, but he had some doubts whether Sunday was a propitious day.

"Why not?" replied the madame. "You have to eat upon Sunday. One thing is just as necessary and just as good for you as the other." Negotiations were then begun, and the madame stated that her prices scaled from $1 up to $2, according to the amount of information required.

"I will tell you everything you want to know," said Madame, "and you won't have to come again in a week's time. I will post you about things that you never thought of." Reassured by these promises the reporter and Madam Montgomery, who is fat, rather frowsy, not too neat in appearance, and certainly forty, seated themselves at a small table in the front room, the husband and a lady friend having vacated it. There were no mysterious machines, no crucibles, none of the trimmings of a first-class seer. The Madame drew towards a small red painted tin box inscribed with the mysterous legend, "Yum, yum, yum, yum, whistle chewing gum," produced a pack of debilitated cards and proceeded to shuffle them. The party who was anxious for a glimpse of futurity demurred. He did not believe in the card racket. He could do that himself. He wanted something fresher than that. The madame said it was the best plan.

The reporter said that he did not see how his fortune depended upon whether he cut ace or jack. The madame said it did in her case, as she was born with a caul, and was ushered into the world with other mysterious signs. This did not satisfy, and the customer proposed something better.

"Can't you go into a trance?"

"No, sir; an Irish woman never goes to sleep except when she goes to bed. I have three packs of cards and a glass, and I can tell all you want to know."

The glass was a small globular arrangement, and the plan is that the questioner should hold it in his hand while madame peers into it. This was all she could do and as the reporter refused to trust the greasy deck or the doubtful hand glass, he withdrew without getting any glimpse of his future, the "Great European Fortune-teller" cautioning him not to throw away his chance. Mrs. Montgomery is hardly a professional. Her customers are of the ignorant class who are ready to believe everything. She unwinds the usual story about blonde ladies, and men with dark hair, and as she says herself, can probably tell anybody several things that they never thought of. She makes a scant living out of the contributions of a few customers, principally women; shuffles cards with the agility of a gambler and is especially proud of being "born with a caul."

lives at 1413 Morgan street, and she states that she is a spiritualist, natural clairvoyant, trance test and business medium. She has a very good trade, so good in fact that she deals with nobody who does not come well endorsed.

MRS. E. J. SIBILLE.

No. 1524 Madison street, is a neat, two-story brick building, and exteriorly there is nothing to denote that the dark future is unveiled inside. It is the residence of Mrs. E. J. Sibille, who pays a license of $100 a year for the privilege of telling gullible people what will happen to them within the coming fifty years. A POST-DISPATCH reporter, anxious to have the future revealed, called at the above number yesterday and boldly sounded the knocker. As the reporter ascended the steps a kindly-faced old lady was looking from the window. In answer to the bell a young lady came to the door, and in answer to a request to see Mrs. Sibille, said, "Mrs. Sibille does not wait on gentlemen."

MRS. S. V. LANKTON.

Mrs. S. V. Lankton advertises herself as an Indian Fortune-Teller, and pursues her avocation in a tumble-down little house on Seventh street between Carr and Wash. The entrance is a gloomy and uninviting passage-way between a couple of second-hand stores, in fact there are few things in the locality that are not more or less second-hand, if not third or fourth. An odor of stale fish and dessicated hoop skirts and other disintegrating relics of a high civilization is manifest. The reporter worked his way back into the rear of the house and there found a door with a bell pull, which he pulled. After several experiments in tintinnabulation a woman appeared in a shiny dress and smiled sweetly on the scribe. "I want to see Mrs. Lankton," said he, "the great Indian Fortune-teller."

"Oh," she replied, "walk right in. Go up these stairs and out into the front of the house."

The reporter followed her instructions and found himself in a parlor with an archaic piano, a stringless guitar, a bible, a lot of heterogenious furniture, and a number of pictures upon the walls which nad evidently been subjected to that culinary process known as boning before they were made immortal by the glowing finger of art. "Mrs Lankton will be in in a minute," said the shiny woman vindictively poking the fire, "she's in the next room," and from the next room came an oleaginous voice telling the possessor of a soprano voice something about a journey over deep water, a litter with money, a wedding ring in the distance and that sort of thing. Mrs. Lankton ran in for a minute to take a private view of the new victim. Mrs. Lankton is not a prepossesing person by any means. She is swarthy of hue and fat of person. Her sylph-like form was like nothing in the world but an exaggerated toy balloon with a constriction about the middle. If she weighs a pound, and the reporter is morally convinced that she does, she will tip the scale at 250. A lopsided picture of herself hung behind her as she parleyed with the reporter and the scribe had an opportunity of seeing what the last fifty or sixty years had done for her in the way of flesh.

"Do you want your fortune told?" said she.

"What does it cost?"

"A dollar."

"Will you guarantee me a dollar's worth of good out of it. Or, if I ain't satisfied with the fortune, may I have my money back?"

"Oh, no. I can't tell how it will be till I see the cards."

"Well, I don't blow no dollar into this game," said the reporter ungrammatically, perhaps, but truthfully, and then he explained his mission to the lady.

"I don't know anything about reporters. I have lived twenty-three years in this town and every lady in it almost knows me."

"What class of business do you have?"

"Mostly business people. I don't allow any improper persons or low vulgar people to come here," and the lady assumed an air of Spartan virtue which would have done infinite credit to the chaste Diana.

"What do business people want to know?"

"Things about business—whether they ought to do things or not, you know; and they all come back to me after they have been here once."

"Do you believe in this thing yourself, Mrs. Lankton?"

"Sir?!!" said she.

"I said do you believe in this kind of funny business, yourself?"

"If I did not I would not practice it. I would not do anything which I did not know was right and true."

"Well, how do you tell fortunes?"

"With cards and personal magnetism."

"What proportion of cards and what proportion of magnetism do you mix in?"

"Well, I take three packs of cards——" here a pounding upon the door from the impatient visitor in the next room called the madam away and the reporter left. Mrs. Lankton confessed to an average of five fortunes a day, which she considered cheap for the money, and as she works Sundays and week days, a very close idea may be formed of her revenue.

Proofs of the Adage That History Repeats Itself.

From the London Globe.

That history repeats itself is an ancient truism. It is, however, interesting to note how many great events have been duplicated, as it were, by shadowy imitations, and how many novelties are but "new toot, (t. e. tunes) on auld horns," as King Jamie expressed it. As years pass away the imitations frequently drop into obscurity. Everyone has heard of Charlotte Corday, but few people remember Cecile Renault, the young girl who attempted to follow in her footsteps. This young woman presented herself repeatedly at the house of Robespierre, urgently endeavoring to gain admittance to him; but Marat's fate had probably made his colleague suspicious, and the police searched a parcel Cecile carried. It contained two knives, and from this and other circumstances there appears little doubt that the young girl shared Charlotte Corday's enthusiasm, as she eventually did her fate. Cecile Renault was guillotined on the charge of an intention to assassinate.

Joan of Arc is a familiar historical character; but only a vague memory survives of that "woman of Berri, named Catharine," who at the same time as the maiden of Domremy was urging her father to assist her in her "mission," gave out that she also had "beheld visions of fair ladies with crowns of gold, who bade her go through France seeking subsidies and men-at-arms for the Dauphin." This "Catharine" never appears to have gained the belief of her neighbors, in spite of her promises that her "fair ladies" would reveal "hidden treasures" to her followers; and she is now only remembered as a kind of feeble shadow of the famous Maid of Orleans.

If Fuller is to be believed, one of the most curious instances of this kind of historical repetition occurred in the thirteenth century. It is stated that so universal was the crusading enthusiasm at this era, that in 1213 not less than 30,000 children set out for the Holy Land. This "Child's Crusade" was organized by two worthless monks, who designed to sell their deluded victims as slaves in Africa. According to the story nearly all the ships containing the young enthusiasts were wrecked off the coast of Italy. A few vessels reached Africa, where the unhappy children were sold as slaves and carried into the interior of the country; some of the ships were driven into the port of Genoa, where some of the young crusaders were rescued and restored to their parents. Two merchants of Marseilles are said to have been executed for complicity in the crime.

A Curious Reminisence.

New York Cor. Cincinnati Gazette.

The death of the late Robert S. Swords recalls a peculiar feature in the book trade. His father was the founder of the old house of Swords, Stanford & Co., which was for so many years distinguished for the sales of Bibles, prayer books and other religious literature. This very house, however, published the first edition of Paine's "Age of Reason." I never understood how a religious concern could justify such an inconsistency, but perhaps they thought the bane and the antidote should go together. No respectable house at the present day would issue such a work. Paine was not here at the time the book appeared. He was, in fact, unable to leave Paris, and hence gave the MSS. to Joel Barlow who was about to sail for America. Barlow, being a diplomate, could not be retained by the rulers of Paris during the Reign of Terror. Paine, however, being a member of the convention, was imprisoned in the Luxembourg, where he wrote the above mentioned volume. The "Age of Reason," though now but little read, afforded Ingersoll a basis for his attack on Christianity. He is simply Tom Paine dressed up in a neat and elegant style. Six years after the publication of the "Age of Reason" Paine returned to America, and Jefferson (who was equally opposed to Christianity) paid him much attention, but the public shrank from the author of such a volume, and he died generally detested.

Wagner's New Opera.

From the London Telegraph.

After considerable delay, the production of Richard Wagner's latest opera, "Parcival," has been assured by the lavish generosity of King Louis of Bavaria, who has out of his privy purse, made up the gross amount required to bring out that great work at Bayreuth with all the splendor and completeness exacted by its composer. The subscriptions set on foot throughout Germany had, strange to say, failed to achieve this desirable result, and some £15,000 were still wanting to provide for the expense of putting "Parcival" on the stage, and of meeting the demands of the vocal and instrumental executants to whom Wagner proposed to confide the performance of the opera. This sum his magnificent patron and friend, King Louis has disbursed for the above purposes. His Majesty has also granted his permission to the leading artists of his own theater, in Munich, to accept engagements for the summer of 1882 at Bayreuth, when and where "Parcival" will be produced in the Festal Theatre, specially erected some years ago under Wagner's personal instructions and supervision for the initial performance of his renowned Trilogy. Every conceivable precaution will be taken by the great composer and his committee of management to keep out all profane persons, not avowed and notorious worshippers of his music, from the series of representations destined to take place eighteen months hence.

FASHIONABLE FANCIES.

From the New York Mail.

Full blown crushed roses are much used in corsage bouquets.

Small butter dishes are of silver, with gold centres chased in imitation of Chinese crackle ware.

An odd fan of many colored paroquet feathers has a tiny humming-bird nestled in its snowy center.

Heliotrope is not worn as much this season as last year, since it is found to be becoming to few of our countrywomen.

The new shade of red is a brickish tint resembling the color of iron rust. It is used in combination with black for evening.

Sea-foam green is a favorite evening color. It is a tint of blue green like the crested wave and combines beautifully with pink.

Desert knives and forks of small and slender shapes have variagated laminated handles formed by uniting a number of metals.

The Mosquetaire glove is incorrectly called after Bernhardt, as it was designed and worn before the clever French woman was born.

Tete-a-tete sets are shown with slender teapot, cream pitcher, sugar bowl and tiny sugar tongs of silver and cups of Sevres or other rare china.

New notepaper has a flower in the place of the monogram. A white daisy on a golden background is shown for sentimentally inclined young ladies.

Harlequin ice-cream sets are shown. The handles of the spoons are of many colors, each varying with the various metals used. The bowls of the spoons are of several shades of gold.

Handscreens, which may also be used for fans, are of white satin embroidered in delicate chenille, with moss rosebuds and forget-me-nots, and a golden butterfly which hovers near.

Queen Victoria's effort to revive the one-button glove has met with singular want of success, as the shortest glove in the new style is in the six-button length. Queen Victoria has probably very little influence with her administration.

BOSTON CHATTER.

Made Lands and Disease—Pride in the Hub, the Center of Culture—Coasting on Boston Common.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, January 18, 1881.—As I sit at my desk, merry shouts and gleeful laughter of childish voices come to my ears through the closed windows, from the "vacant lot" near the back of our house, which the snows of winter have converted into the gayest kind of gala ground for the children of the neighborhood. This South End of the Hub is a flat country, with neither the advantages or the disadvantages of a hilly region. This South End is also largely composed of "made land," as housekeepers in thousands of our best houses on our finest streets know to their inconvenience, to say the least, whenever it thaws or rains hard, their basements are more or less overflowed with water, which rises up from the doubtful regions beneath the soil of, ashes and debris on which the buildings stand. Very many of our first-class houses have no cellars at all, for the very excellent and sensible reason that there's nothing to dig them in, and in many houses which do rejoice in these appendages to housekeeping conveniences, I have been told that it is no unusual thing to find the ash-barrel floating about of a morning in jolly fashion, and to have to strain the coal in a sieve before replenishing the furnace fire.

And then people wonder at diptheria, and can't think where it comes from!

Fortunately, our house is situated on "The Neck," as it used to be called in the days of old Boston and old Roxbury (now Boston Highlands), when the two were connected by the narrow isthmus, which was a mile in length, and "so narrow and low between tide-washed flats that it was often submerged," as an old writer once said. Still, it is real land,—though it isn't safe to say too much in boastful fashion, for our back-yard is only ashes, and the threshold of our back-yard gate has an uneasy tendency to sink China-wards. The amount of our artificial land may be better estimated by figures, I suppose, so I will add here that whereas this blessed little peninsular once contained but 783 acres, two miles at greatest length, by one in extremest breadth, it now consists of 1,829 acres, this once narrowest point of the city being now the very broadest, the wide, oozy, salt marshes, the estuaries, coverts and bays once stretching wide on its northern and southern bound having been "reclaimed," as the phrase goes, to represent the Mrs. Partington act of sweeping out the ocean with the broom of improvement, from our ambitious front door. Lest you should under estimate the extent of present Boston, with its modern additions as well as improvements, I will say, by way of parenthesis, that since we gobbled up Charlestown, Roxbury, and the other neighboring small fry, we measure some 23,661 acres in all. So never call us a one-horse town again, if you please, and besides, if we're not as big as New York or London, we're—well there's an indescribable something about us that acts as an irresistible magnet to all who have once felt our effect.

In a letter received to-day from a homesick Bostonian, two years absent in Colorado, where his unreliable lunge have exiled him, he exclaims, "Dear old conservative Boston! You may roam the wide world over and get nothing to compensate for absence therefrom." And one of the brightest literary women that the big waste has produced, who came here last fall as to the Mecca of all her earthly desires, and who, forthwith got a first-class position on a certain Boston daily that had never before been persuaded to take a woman on its staff, told me that for weeks after getting here the first thought that came to her upon waking every morning was, "Am I really in Boston, or is it all a dream?"

While a certain enthusiastic gentleman, whose home is in one of the largest and best of the blooming Western States, writes me in reply to a letter in which I conscientiously endeavor to throw cold water on his feverish ardor for Eastern migration. "If I didn't know better, I should think you were so exclusive as not to want to share with Westerners the benefits of culture possessed by the "Hub" over any other city of which I have knowledge. No, I don't think my impressions of your city are too ideal a character; for what I have seen and learned when there has given me an insight into what our Western people are pleased to sarcastically denominate culchaw? An Eden is certainly more to be desired than is a sandy, arid desert, so, for educational purposes, in all that pertains to the liberal arts and sciences, is the place where they rise and come to perfection."

I make the above quotations just to show you what a powerful charm this little peninsula (and ashes) city wields over the imaginations of those who have fallen under its spell. Those who are Boston-crazy must go to Boston or die. There is no two ways about it. Boston always acted as a perfect loadstone to draw all the smartest and best young people out of the State of Maine. Nearly all our most successful business men and a large proportion of our professional men are from Maine. But our own young people go West. Boston has no such charms for them. The home-sick consumptive in Colorado, by-the-way, is only an adopted Bostonian originally from Maine. We who were born and brought up here often find that the vaunted Athens will not give us any chance to grow up and out of the estate to which we were born, and to give our ambition free air in which to try its wings, we have to leave the Hub, dear as it is to us as a birthplace and a home. I write perhaps as I feel on this point, somewhat bitterly—for probably in another year I may be very many miles away from my own home, because therein the opening is not given to a certain lucrative and honorable career which most of the Western and some of the conservative old Middle States freely offer.

But I have strayed a long ways from the childish voices which opened my letter, and which have now ceased, as the hour is past that when all good children are abed. The mention of made land was suggested by the fact which I was about to explain, of the rare opportunity in this part of the city for a "coast," it resulting from a slight declivity from the street level to that of the vacant lot, not yet graded up. In the West End, on Beacon Hill, there are grand coasts down all the narrow streets, and many are the reminiscences connected therewith in connection with the tom-boyish days of my childhood, when we lived on the hill and when I was the happy possessor of a dainty girl's sled—I always wanted a boy's sled instead, but they wouldn't let me have one—which I used to laboriously drag up-hill for the fun of coasting down. Isn't that about the way we do in both the business and pleasure of after life?

Boston Common is the grand place for coasting, however. It is a perfect carnival every evening and during part of the day. Public locomotion is greatly impeded thereby, it is true, and to attempt to pedestrianize on this sacred enclosure while snow is on the ground is to be almost certainly tripped up by a sled or run down by a "double-runner," which latter engine of speed is no light affair, with its long carpeted board swivelled onto two strong sleds and carrying a load of six to ten boys.

But the right to coast on Boston Common is sacred and inalienable to Boston boys.

"In the good old colony days, when we lived under the king," or rather, when the king claimed to govern our rebellious city, in the person of Gen. Gage, who was soon made to "evacuate," some of the British officers tried to interfere with the boys who were coasting on the common, whereupon the urchins went to headquarters with their complaint, and got a metaphorical pat on the cranium by the good-natured General, and permission to coast all they pleased, which permission has never since been denied, and so they have the privilege of going down hill at lightning speed, running headforemost into trees to the detriment alike of trees and heads, tripping up passers-by, keeping the police busy, making lively sales for liniments and plasters and having fun generally.

Girls don't coast on the common poor things! They didn't interview Gen. Gage and so they have no right, either permissive or prescriptive. The suffragists should take this matter in hand. If a girl wants to smash her skull against a tree hasn't she as good a right as a boy?

The Palisades Tunnel.

From the New York Sun.

The contract for constructing the tunnel for the New York, Ontario and Western railroad tracks through the Palisades from Weehawken to New Durham, N. J., has been awarded to Smith, Ripley & Coleman, of this city, the contractors for the building of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western extension from Binghampton. The contractors are given about fifteen days in which to get the material on the ground and begin work. One year from that time they agree to have the tunnel ready for tracks.

The tunnel is to be 4,200 feet, or about four-fifths of a mile in length. The hill through which it is to be dug is 250 feet high, and the tunnell will be about that distance below the surface. Its eastern entrance will be about one thousand feet back from the Hudson River at Weehawken ferry. It will be approached by an up grade just sufficient for drainage. The contract provides that the tunnel shall be wide enough for double tracks.

In order to give as great a working surface as possible, five shafts will be sunk, so that work may be pushed on ten faces at one time. All the machinery used will be of the most approved kind. Compressed air, power drills, and other inventions to facilitate progress will be employed. The engineers expect to encounter chiefly the trap-rock formation, which will make very little brick arching necessary.

Experience in the West Point Tunnel makes the company confident that the work can be done in the specified time, which is unprecedently short for an undertaking of that magnitude. The contractors will employ all the men they can use to advantage, and will carry on the work at night by the aid of electric lights. Mr. Coleman, a member of the firm of contractors, will personally superintend the work. Walter Katte, Chief Engineer of the New York, Ontario and Western, will have supervisory charge of the undertaking for the company.

Extensive purchases of land around the entrances to the proposed tunnel have been made by the company. The work of getting deeds, looking up titles, etc., has not been near enough finished, the representatives of the company say, to warrant them in giving particulars at present. They also decline to give the figures at which the contract for building the tunnel was awarded. It was learned from another source that the contract was let for $650,000. A meeting of the directors will be held to-day, at which the award will be confirmed, and it is understood that General E. F. Winslow, President of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company, will be elected president.

Schurz and Kate Sprague.

From the Kansas City Times.

It is now an open secret that Schurz at one time, and for a long time, greatly admired Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague—in fact his regard for her was so g-eat that when a picture of Mrs. Sprague was being painted by a Washington artist, Schurz craved the privilege of being introduced as one of the figures in the study. The picture was to represent Mrs. Sprague standing in the lawn at Edgewood looking toward the old family mansion, and it was Schurz's desire to figure as being posed under one of the old elms looking in the direction of Mrs. Sprague. Of course his request was not complied with. Schurz, if he ever did really admire Mrs. Sprague, admired her with a cold, platonic admiration. He was differently organized from Conkling. Schurz was always cold and unimpassioned. Conkling, notwithstanding his long schooling as a politician, was nothing if not passionate. Schurz' relationship with Mrs. Sprague could never have amounted to anything more than a placid friendship, while Conkling's might have been of an entirely different character.

Hard Times in Germany.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

A foreign correspondent writes to us: "Misery is very great in Germany. Selling prices and land rents are falling frightfully low. The result is that debtors on mortgage cannot pay the interest of their debts, and are dispossessed and their properties frequently sold at half the value they had some time ago. This depreciation cannot be attributed to foreign competition, as the importation of corn and other produce has been taxed. It is generally believed that the fall in prices is due to the scarcity of cash. Germany wanted to have the gold standard like England; but gold does not remain in the country, and, circulation being slow, everything decays, and agriculture languishes still more than manufactures and industry."

NEW YORK Bulletin: Now that the mammoth steamer Great Eastern is "out of business" (the trans-Atlantic live-stock speculation, in which she was to engage, having fallen through), possibly it would not be a bad idea to engage her as an additional feature for the coming World's Fair.

THE ice in St. Francis River, between Madison and Wittsburg, is reported by Captain Randall to be three feet thick, heavy teams having crossed over. The backwater from the present rise in the Mississippi will soon break up the ice and let out the Rene Macready, ice-bound ten miles below Wittsburg.

NEW ORLEANS Democrat: Capt. John Mossop, chief clerk of the John W. Cannon, an experienced steamboatman, discussing river rates, is rather emphatic in his denial of the statemeist that the New Orleans boats charged more than the St. Louis or any other coast freighters did. He said that the talk about fine boats necessitating higher rates was all nonsense. Who would pay a fine boat more for carrying goods, simply because it was a fine boat, than they would give an ordinary vessel? It was impossible, he said, for St. Louis boats to carry freight fifty to seventy-five per cent lower than the New Orleans boats and pay expenses, even if they did not exceed fifty dollars a day.

N. O. DEMOCRAT, 22: The Fanchon arrived yesterday from the Opelousas, flat in the water, part of her cargo being 784 barrels molasses. The Yazoo Valley, Capt. Geo. W. Rea, clerks H. C. Boazman and Lee Carpenter, arrived yesterday noon from Shreveport, and will return to-day at 5 p. m. The Yazoo Valley would have brought 3,000 bales of cotton but for fear of getting through Old River, where she was aground three and a half hours as it was. Part of her cargo was 250 barrels flour from St. Louis, by rail to Shreveport, from whence, for want of a market, it was ordered here. Sam McBride and Lew Pierce, pilots, Lew Hellings and partner, engineers, late of the Golden City, arrived here yesterday from the Ohio, to go on the Granite State.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE—Rice's Extravaganza.

OLYMPIC—Fanny Davenport.

POPE'S—Gilmore & Benton's Consolidation.

The POST-DISPATCH has much the largest BONA FIDE circulation ever attained by any afternoon paper in St. Louis; it has a larger city circulation than any morning paper in St. Louis (except one); its receipts for circulation by carriers are ten times as large, and it sells twenty times as many papers on the streets, by news-boys, as all other afternoon publications combined.

THREE men are said to be settled upon for inmates of GARFIELD'S Model Cabinet—BLAINE, FOSTER and ALLISON.

LOUISIANA and Florida are shivering under a mantle of snow. This is one of the winters that the "oldest inhabitant" will talk about a century hence.

WE learn that a majority of Congressmen are suffering from malaria and chills this winter. The bills that they are introducing are "no great shakes," though.

IT is quite sad when a good priest like FATHER O'REILLY, is compelled to sue "a great religious newspaper" for defamation of character. And $50,000 worth, too, at that.

BERNHARDT collected $41,478 from Chicagoans in two weeks and it is reported that her receipts since coming to the country foot up to $248,368. This shows what judicious advertising will do.

AN ordinance has been passed by the Cincinnati Council authorizing the Mayor to license variety shows at his discretion. This will put the responsibility for the social cancers on the proper shoulders.

THE rebel organ started at Memphis by KERNAN, the Okolona rattlebrain, has perished. He has ceased to be profitable to the Republican managers and they have left him to starve. He ought to have a little office under GARFIELD.

THE Hindoo Nautch dancers brought to New York by a theatrical manager, are a failure. There is nothing musical or suggestive in the performance, and the highly cultivated American public stands by the old-fashioned semi-nude ballet.

CONSIDERABLE surprise is manifested throughout the country that nobody should have mentioned ELIHU B. WASHBURNE for a place in GARFIELD'S Cabinet. We can recall the time when ELIHU was regarded as a useful citizen.

AN expedition is now talked of to go in search of BENNETT'S North Pole searcher, the Jeanette. This will afford another adventurous crowd an opportunity in due time to search for the searchers of the searcher. In this way the cause of science will be subserved indefinitely.

A HERD of vagabonds has commenced walking for the O'LEARY belt in New York, and strange as it may appear, a crowd of people was on had last night to witness the start. Walking matches are amost as respectable now as prize fights and it is a pity that men who aid and abet them can't be sent to jail.

THE business of Hon. CHAS. P. JOHNSON in the State Legislature is that of an Obstructor. If he only succeeds in preventing the passage of a single bill he will earn the gratitude of the State, but his standing and influence are such that we expect him to personally strangle at least two hundred monstrosities.

A FIRE damaged the Metropolitan Hotel and Niblo's Theater in New York City yesterdays. It seems to be the fate of all hotels and theater to go up in smoke sooner or later and when it comes to combining two such inflamable institutions under one roof, the law of averages is certainly put to a very severe strain.

CAPT. EADS and his Ship Railway project have received a back-set in the refusal of the Inter-Oceanic Canal Committee to recommend the Government to guarantee his bonds. The pecuniary feature of the measure was the vital part. The bill now is like the play of HAMLET with the Prince knocked out. But MR. EADS is not as one altogether without hope. He has energy and great persuasive powers.

THE Kansas City Journal has a new press and stereotyping apparatus. Last Sunday it tried to print a cut representing Mr. HAMMERSLOUGH, one of the advertising business men of the Western porkopolis. The picture looks like a buckwheat cake plastered over the end of an old-fashioned churn. In view of the utter unrecognizable character of the cut, the remark that "it is so well-known that it needs no formal introduction" seems like a ribald joke. It is a shame that Mr. H. should pay his money to have his features advertised and have a cut palmed off on him which looks for all the world as though it was designed to represent the back of his head—the rear elevation, so to speak.

THEY have commenced arresting people in New York on suspicion of being Nihilists. This is a new wrinkle in the land of the free and home of the brave. As Nihilism does not contemplate the destruction of our beautiful governmental fabric, and as belonging to a secret society does not constitute an offense under our system, we take it that some officious people in New York are making fools of themselves.

SOCIETY in New England has been shocked by the conduct of Major GEO. B. FISHER, of Hartford, Conn. The Major was rich, popular, had a pretty wife, a good business and lots of friends and was commandant of the Governer's Foot Guards. The other day he cut and left all. His passion for gambling had ruined him. His training as a Foot Guard will stand him well in hand, but he will find the roads leading to the West in a horrible condition at this season of the year.

A TALENTED man named STUBBS has introduced a bill in the Ohio Legislature to secure a more fitting observance of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, and the Cincinnati Commercial, edited by infidels and scoffers, says that if passed such a law could not be executed because it is "a revival of antiquities that are impertinent." It is the opinion of the agnostic Commercial that such a law would be promptly "dumped on the heap of dead-letter laws, where the refuse of impracticable legislation reposes."

IT is claimed now that the friends of OLIVER in the Pennsylvania Legislature have purchased a sufficient number of Democratic votes, and that his election to-morrow to the Senate is a foregone conclusion. If Pennsylvania is to be ruled by Republicans it is well enough, perhaps, to have the infamous CAMERON gang in the ascendency to the end that the people may be soon disgusted, but we can't exactly approve of the system which some of the Democrats up here have adopted of living off the CAMERON exchequer.

DR. BROOKS AND THE STAGE.

A short time ago the POST-DISPATCH detailed its reporters to interview the leading clergymen of St. Louis and ascertain their views in reference to Miss BERNHARDT, the dramatic sensation of the hour. Among the number called upon was Dr. JAMES H. BROOKS, the eloquent Presbyterian pastor. Mr. BROOKS was not in when the reporter called but Mr. COX, his publisher and right-hand man, was. On being informed of the reporter's mission, Mr. COX, in his capacity as agent, said that Mr. BROOKS had just written and published in the religious periodical called Truth, an article on the stage and society, in which his views of SARAH BERNHARDT would be found. He especially insisted that the terms of the essay were applicable to BERNHARDT. Upon his authority the reporter copied the following sentence from the Truth article as apropos to the subject under consideration:

"Theatrical plays are popular precisely in proportion to their coarseness and lewdness, and the fashionable world is prepared to welcome an actress who is a notorious prostitute.

Mr. Brook's well-known hostility to the stage and its representatives probably prevented this atrocious sentiment from creating a local sensation. The managers of Miss BERNHARDT, however, feel ing that they had a call to defend their partner, addressed a note to Mr. BROOKS, and as a result we have an alleged card this morning addressed to an individual alleged to be H. JARRET, a speculative amusement tramp, in which the pastor denies that he ever wrote the name of BERNHARDT, or ever conversed with a representative of this paper in regard to her. This may be true. The POST-DISPATCH reporter did not say that he had personally interviewed Mr. BROOKS. He merely reproduced the sentiments which he wrote in Truth, and which were said, by his agent, to be his opinion of the stage and BERNHARDT. Mr. BROOKS has not denied the paternity of the sentiment which we have quoted. It was published by us ten days ago and he did not think it important enough to send us a denial. He does not deny now, notwithstanding the sycophantic flattery and taffy of this alleged JARRET, vender of theatrical demoralization, that the play-house is popular in proportion to its lewdness, and that society is willing to welcome an actress who is a notorious prostitute. The extent of his denial is that he was not interviewed in person by a reporter for this paper and that in denouncing the stage and actresses he did not use the name of BERNHARDT though his publisher says that he had direct reference to the French actress when he wrote the lines "and the fashionable world is prepared to welcome an actress who is a notorious prostitute." We think we can afford to leave Dr. BROOKS and the itinerant showman, who vouches for his gentility and high standing, in the congenial society of each other, but now that an objection has been raised, perhaps Mr. BROOKS, who is understood to possess the courage of his convictions, will be kind enough to tell us precisely what he does think about the distinguished representative of the Comedie Francaise, who is expounding the modern Parisian drama in our midst this week.

THE POST-DISPATCH continues to-day the good work, commenced three weeks ago, of pointing out and exposing the great vices that mar our city. The gambling and the variety dens have been shown up and we have the satisfaction of knowing that gambling is less flagrant than it was a month ago, and that two of the worst "dives" in the city, operated under the alluring titles of Variety show and dance-house, have been closed by the authorities. To-day a chapter is devoted to the social pests, male and female, who, under the guise of astrologers, soothsayers, clairvoyants and curs-alls, carry on the most nefarious business known to humanity. In medicine these people are quacks and in science impostors. The fact that the great City of St. Louis, in this day of enlightenment, issues licenses to fortune-tellers, is a shame and a disgrace. The pretense of an ability to foretell the future is prima-facie evidence of fraud and humbug. That art died when superstition was driven from the world. Of course there are ignorant, weak-brained people who can be deceived by these knaves, but fortune-telling constitutes a very small percentage of their business. What that vocation really is we have undertaken to demonstrate to-day. If the authorities were in ignorance before they certainly can't plead ignorance now and we trust that fortune-telling and medical quackery will no longer be one of the taxed and licensed industries of St. Louis.

PARSON TALMAGE has recanted the sermon denunciatory of the stage, which he says some witty reporter wrote and palmed off upon him some years ago, and at his regular Sunday exhibition yesterday he took occasion to speak a good word for the drama. He says that the Bible opens and closes with a drama, and he insists that there is no more reason for discarding the drama because it has been put to bad uses than there is for tabooing music because it has been tramped under the foot of the lascivious dance. It always seemed like a glaring inconsistency that a man who has brought to the pulpit all the arts of the burlesque actor and clown, and who has turned his church into a sort of a grotesque show, should be fighting the theaters. There never was any excuse for it save that there was a natural competition between Talmage and the other place where public exhibitions were held. His noble defense of the drama yesterday would seem to indicate that he has reached the point where he no longer fears opposition.

VAN WYCK, who succeeds PADDOCK as United States Senator from Nebraska, is regarded as an anti-railroad man, says a dispatch from Lincoln. When a man's views on corporations and railroad monopolies are so feeble that he is only "regarded' it will not be a difficult matter to locate him after he has associated about three weeks with PLUMB, HILL, SHARON, CAMERON, HALE, MILLER, CAMDEN, FAIR, and the other defenders of capital and corporate interests, who will meet him and greet him at the threshold of the Senate.

PERSONAL.

—Gen. Sherman has a new little granddaughter named Miss Thackera.

—Sarah Bernhardt will prolong her stay in this country until the end of April.

—Gen. Fitzhugh Lee is to give an oration at the unveiling of "Stonewall" Jackson's statue at New Orleans, next May.

—Another Ohio man has gone to the front. He left Cincinnati in the night and stood anxiously on the front end of a ferryboat as it crossed from Detroit to Windsor.

—Senator Hamlin, who has always exulted in his contempt for overcoats and his freedom from colds, has been shut up in his room for a fortnight by an attack of rheumatism.

—The house built in Washington by Commodore Decatur, and afterward occupied by Judah P. Benjamin, is now in possession of Gen. Beale, and Gen. Grant becomes a guest in it while in Washington.

—William F. Dalrymple, of the famous grain farm in Dakota, says the clear profit for 1880 was over $250,000. He raised more than a half million bushels of wheat on 24,000 acres, and sold it in Buffalo at a profit of fifty cents per bushel.

—This sarcastic remark from the Memphis Appeal: "Mr. Waddell, late of the Confederate States Navy, asks to have his political disabilities removed. Congress should grant the request, as he never did the United States any great harm."

—Ex-Governor Bullock, of Georgia, is a man of great affability and fine presence. He has nothing to do with politics, but attends to the treasury of the big Atlanta cotton mills in which he owns stock. He says that his election once upon a time as Governor of the State was a very unfortunate thing for him.

—Patty Oliver, a very clever actress and the original of "Blackeyed Susan," is dead. Chas. Mathews wrote one of his most characteristic letters in contradicting a report of his marriage with her, saying that he was suffering at the time from an accident to his right arm, and would be the last to offer the indignity of a left handed marriage.

Invaluable to Business Men.

From the Western Live Stock Journal.

Our last issue contained a brief paragraph in which we sought to explain to those of our readers who need a daily market report the superior advantages possessed by the POST-DISPATCH, and as we had anticipated, this has called forth from the live stock reporter of the Globe-Democrat a vigorous protest. Facts are facts, no matter by whom uttered; and the fact remains that only upon rare occasions is there such a marked change in the tone of the market that the POST-DISPATCH report can not be relied on; and the POST-DISPATCH reaches the farmer twelve hours sooner than the morning papers.

Grand and Noble Service

From the Missouri Statesman.

The St. Louis POST-DISPATCH is doing the cause of good morals and the supremacy of the law a grand and noble service in its fearless exposition of the gambling hells and lottery swindlers now in full blast in that city in defiance of the statutes. Let it go on in its great work, and after it gets its hands fully in swoop down like a cyclone on the liquor hells of the city.

A Unique Senator.

Uncle Dave Armstrong's ejaculations when he heard of Morgan Boland's confirmation by the State Senate were of too sacred a character to be recorded in this secular column.

That Horrid Butterine.

ST. LOUIS, January 24, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Having been victimized by the miserable compound designated "Butterine," "Lardine," "Suine," etc., and noting with some measure of interest the communications pro and con in your late issues concerning the same, I have taken some pains to ascertain the composition of the stuff so far as practicable, and find that the facts materially differ from the statements made by Mr. J. C. Spring, agent for Chicago manufactures of butterine. By inquiry among our wholesale dealers I learn that representatives of Chicago manufactures have bought and are now buying in our market all the cheap country roll and the lowest grades of packed butter obtained, solely for use in the manufacture of "butterine," etc. This hardly substantiates the statement of Mr. Spring that "only the best sweet, fresh butter" is used. If this is true, as it concerns the butter part of the mixture, is it not more than probable that the "hog" part of it is equally unreliable and objectionable? The fact is, Mr. Editor, "it looks nice" and is a "gay deceiver," but it's nasty and absolutely unfit for the palate or stomach.

Truly yours, A VICTIM.

Lincoln's Assassination.

ST. LOUIS, January 24.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please answer the following question to settle a dispute: Was President Lincoln shot on Good Friday? Respectfully, A. WATTER.

[Mr. Lincoln was shot on the 14th day of April, 1865, on what is known as Good Friday. —ED. P.-D.

JEFFERSON CITY.

Proceedings in the Senate and the House To-day.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, January 24.—In the Senate very little business was done. A bill was introduced providing for the appointment of a committee to settle with the State Auditor and Treasurer for 1877 and 1878. The Phelan committees report for said years has never been approved. Also an act permitting the fund commissioners to purchase bonds at a higher rate than at present allowed. Adjourned till morning. In the House an attempt was made to have a committee of seven appointed to establish and furnish a printing office at the penitentiary for the purpose of doing the State work, but owing to a slim house the measure failed, about forty members being absent. In the House the bill providing for the approval of bonds in replevin suits by constables instead of justices, was read a third time and passed. The House bill making it the duty of County Courts to collect, preserve, and securely invest at the highest rate of interest that can be obtained, not exceeding ten nor less than six per cent per annum on unincumbered real estate securities with personal security in addition thereto the proceeds of all moneys, stocks, bonds and other property belonging to county school funds, was read the third time and passed. Bills were introduced compelling builders of wire fences to place posts twelve feet apart and seven wires upon the same; preventing the manufacture and sale of adulterated butter; fixing a minimum fine for failure to take out a billiard table license at $50; repealing the imprisonment clause of the revised statutes as a penalty for the illegal solemnization of marriages. Adjourned till morning.

A JESUIT SHOT.

The Inhumanity and Cruelty of Guatemala to an Inoffensive Priest.

NEW ORLEANS, January 24.—The steamer Wanderer brings news of great excitement in the British Honduras over the shooting by order of President Barrios, of Guatemala, of the Jesuit, Rev. H. Gillet, of Belize under the laws of Guatemala. All the Jesuits will be banished, and any caught in that republic are invariably executed. Father Gillet visited Guatemala for his health. Immediately upon his arrival at Livingston he was arrested, heavily ironed and sent to Guatemala City, where he was tried, sentenced and executed on the 17th.

A frightful railroad accident occurred at Puerto Cortes. A train consisting of two passengenr coaches, mail and baggage cars, jumped the track at the Golden Rock curve, Amour Mountain, and fell seventy feet. Nearly all on board were killed.

Detroit News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, MICH., January 24.—Edward Cross, a plumber, aged eighteen years, fell from the fourth story of the new Christian Herald building this morning, striking and breaking two planks in his fall, and miraculously escaping without a broken bone. He was badly shaken up, however.

Mary-Ann Smith was found hanging to a lamp post, at the corner of Griswold and Jefferson streets, this morning, in the agonies of parturition, and was taken into the Great Western up town ticket office by Officer Coleman, who called a conveyance and had her removed to the House of Providence, where she shortly afterwards gave birth to a child. LONDON, January 24.—The Hanlon and Laycock race is postponed till February the 14th. The ice is disappearing rapidly from the Thames.

THE COERCION BILL.

LONDON, January 24.—A crisis is likely to occur this week. Mr. Forster will introduce his coercion bills to-day, and Gladstone will move on Tuesday that these bills shall have precedence over other business. The Irish members publicly announce their intention to obstruct these measures at every stage, and affirm they have reason to expect the assistance of the Radicals, many of whom notoriously dislike every interference with rights of minorities, but any judicious measure will secure the support of the great majority of the House.

BOYCOTTING.

The emergency committee of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ireland has forwarded a number of men by train from Dublin to Ballina, County Mayo, to relieve Miss Gaidmer, who is being "Boycotted." The authorities have furnished an escort of military to protect the men to their destination.

A Good Day for Libel Suits.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, January 24.—Three big libel suits commenced here to-day. John Lipscomb sues the Cleveland Herald Company for $20,000 damages for charging him with incest with two of his daughters, claiming he begot nine illegitimate children by a mistress, and had committed incest with two of them, one of whom was in an interesting condition. The second suit is brought by the same against Samuel Job superintendent of the Bethel Association, who caused Lipscomb's arrest for incest and is for $10,000.

The third suit is by Mary Cordelia Treat, daughter of Lipscomb, and her husband, Geo. Treat. They sue the Herald for $20,000, for charging Mrs. Treat and her sister Hattie with committing incest with their father, Lipscombe, and for publishing that Cordelia half admitted the crime. These are the third and fourth libel suits begun against the Herald in a few months. Job is a man of good reputation and a minister of the gospel. Lipscombe and his family have created more or less gossip in the past.

Central Pacific Controversy.

WASHINGTON, January 24.—The controversy between the Auditor of the Pacific Railroad accounts and the railroad causes comment. Auditor French this morning intimated that the company contemplated the disposal of certain property in violation of the last clause of section 9 of the Thurman Act. The controversy also relates to the payment of a declared three per cent dividend. Regarding this portion of the clause Auditor French has decided the dividend cannot lawfully be allowed and the matter has, with that decision, passed from his hands to the Department of Justice, unless representations from the officers of the Central Pacific Railroad satisfactory to the government are presented. Auditor French accompanied by Solicitor-General Phillips of the department of justice and Assistant Attorney-General McCammon for the Department of the Interior will leave for New York to-morrow evening with a view to proceeding in the cases.

Death of Justus C. Ramsey.

ST. PAUL, January 24.—Justus C. Ramsey, brother of the Secretary of War, was found dead in his bed in this city to-day, his death resulting from heart disease. The deceased came here from Philadelphia in 1849 and was regarded as one of our most worthy citizens, and has held many positions of trust in this state. He died without issue, having never married, and leaves a considerable estate.

The New Police Commissioners

Police Commissioners Boland and Kinkead qualified for office this afternoon in the Circuit Clerk's office. They pledge themselves to faithfully discharge the duties of their office and promise under oath that in any and every appointment or removal to and from the Police force, they will in no case and under no pretext appoint or remove any policeman or officer on account of the political opinions of such policeman or officer, or for any other cause or reason than the fitness or unfitness of such person in the best judgment of the commissioners.

New Indictments.

The grand jury has found the following indictments to which the parties plead not guilty: Mollie Jackson, beastiality: Thomas Wall, assault to kill: Charles Gayner and Thomas Whalen, burglary in the second degree and larceny; Charles Davis, Andrew Golloway, Thomas Hollins and Stuart King, grand larceny.

Jurisdiction of Justices.

Judge Thayer rendered a decision to-day involving the question of the jurisdiction of justices of the peace. He holds that if a defendant appears before a justice to bottom a case on its merits he waives the jurisdictional defect and renders himself amenable to judgment.

HORRIBLE ACCIDENT.

An Unknown Man in East St. Louis Killed by a Switch Engine.

Another one of those shocking railroad accidents, which are becoming painfully numerous in East St. Louis, occurred about eight o'clock this morning on the tracks of the Illinois and St. Louis Railroad, near the Pittsburg Dyke. The victim this morning was a gray-haired old man, about 65 years of age, a total stranger in East St. Louis, not even his name or relations being known by his fellow-workmen. A switch engine was engaged in making up a freight train near the dyke when the accident took place. The old man was engaged in digging the dirt from the frogs of the track, when the engine bore down upon him. He was in a stooping position, with his back turned to the approaching engine. Just as the train arrived within a few feet of the old man the engineer saw and warned him, but the close proximity to danger seemed to transfix him to the spot. The brakes were immediately reversed but too late. The body was struck by the tender and shoved several feet before the engine could be brought to a stand-still. Life was not yet extinct but the body was in a frightfully mangled condition. The blood-stained tender, the pieces of flesh and the frozen pools of clotted blood along the track showed too plainly what horrible suffering the old man must have undergone during the forty minutes which intervened between the accident and the moment when death relieved him of his sufferings. He was removed to one of the small switch houses, and Dr. Winton summoned, but before the arrival of the doctor the old man expired, after suffering the most excruciating pain. Coroner Bader was notified and arrived on the 2 o'clock train to hold an inquest.

THE GUNDAKER CASE.

Trial of the Famous Suit Set For To-morrow.

The well-known case of Henry Gundaker against E. C. Cabell, R. D. Lancaster and the members of the Democratic Central Committee, is set for to-morrow in Circuit Court No. 2. The following are the defendants to the suit, which calls for $500 judgment on account of the loss to plaintiff of his seat as a delegate to the Judicial Convention in July last year: Senator Cabell, Richard D. Lancaster, Ed. Butler, Frank D. Turner, Wm. Betzoid, Burney Feldmeier, Albert Schwind, Theodore Schoenlan, John Carroll, Michael Reilly, Daniel Kerwin, Chas. Harrington and Wm. Stanton. The plaintiff paid his subscription for the expenses of conducting the primary election in the Twentieth Ward, and he alleges that he was deprived of his seat as a delegate by fraud practiced at said primary election, with the knowledge of the defendants.

CITY PERSONALS.

Mr. Louis Roth has invested largely in Bernhardt tickets. As a Frenchman he is enthusiastic over the great actress.

MORRIS K. TAYLOR, Esq., of Huntsville, Alabama, father of Hon. W. F. Taylor, the attorney, is at present visiting his son at Normandy, St. Louis county, was on 'Change to-day.

Mr. Frederick Swob, the Bavarian lackey of Miss Bernhardt, after applying for rates at all the hotels in town, finally settled down at the Planters'. He will be found there domiciliated in the cheapest room in the house.

THE report circulated by the speculators that all the best seats for the Berdhardt season are sold, is not true. The treasurer of the Grand Opera-house announces that plenty of good seats may be bought at regular prices at the box-office.

A rumor was current on 'Change to-day that Bernhardt intended visiting the Exchange room at noon. Preparations were at once commenced to give her a reception, and Henry Amelung and and Jim Houseman were pressed into service, but before they could complete arrangements the report was found to be untrue.

The Blind Asylum.

The Legislature Committees on Blind Asylums from the Senate and House visited the institution for the blind on Ninteenth and Morgan streets this morning. Senators Jacobs, Byrn and Gottschalk, and Messrs. Gray, Brady Davis, Daniels and McGinnis were of the party. A thorough inspection of the building was made under the guidance of Dr. Pollak. The proposed sale of the present building and the removal of the institution to the suburbs was discussed and the gentlemen present seemed to favor the project. The members of both committees are also looking into the accommodation furnished by the Fifth Street Railway, in connection with the bill now before the Senate, to charter the new line from Sixth and Market streets to Carondelet.

Court Chips.

The Public Administrator has taken charge of the estates of F. M. Baldwin, William G. Conn and Nettie Butt.

The will of Peter Haupt, bearing date January 9, 1881, was admitted to probate to-day. The property passes to the widow.

The will of Thomas Michiels bearing date February 21, 1874, was admitted to probate to-day. The property is left to the widow.

The Court of Appeals is engaged to-day hearing the docket cases from St. Charles and Warren counties.

An Insane Man's Contract.

Judge Thayer this morning rendered a decision in the case of the Merchants' National Bank vs. A. J. Fielder, granting a new trial and setting aside the judgment. The case was submitted to the jury upon the theory that the contract of a person of unsound mind is simply voidable and not void. As a corrollary from this proposition, the jury were told that even though the defendant was of unsound mind, the plaintiff might recover if it purchased the draft without notice. Careful study of the subject since the trial satisfies Judge Thayer that the direction given was erroneous.

A SERVICE of prayer for colleges will be held at Dr. Ganse's Church, corner of Fourteenth street and Lucas Place, at 11 a. m. Thursday. Short addresses will also be made by several Presbyterian pastors.

THE cases of John C. Vogel and W. V. Wolcott against Dr. Vorster, arising out of peace warrants sworn out by the former parties, will come up before Justice Taffe, at 3 p. m. to-morrow.

Valuable if Genuine.

From the Baltimore Sun.

A rare and valuable painting has just been brought to Baltimore. It is a genuine Da Vinci, and is in the hands of an artist here to be lined. The painting is twelve by eighteen inches—a Madonna and Child—very fine in general appearance and detail, and has the stamp of genuineness upon it. It is owned by Mrs. Haughton B. Robinson, a Spanish lady, residing near Easton, Md. Her father bought it from a convent in Spain, fifty or sixty years ago. It was shipped to Paris and there lost, and has only recently been recovered.

If you wish to win favor with a lady apparelled in sealskin or velvet by stroking what she is wearing with your hand, be sure you do not stroke downward, for the pile of sealskin, as well as velvet is now turned up to all garments made up of those materials. This prevents the matted appearance so often visible in both velvet and furs of long wear.

Odd handscreens are in the form of an owlet or snowy dove with outspread wings mounted on a brazen ball with slender handle. They are hung on the wall for ornament when not in use.

The Markets.

MORNING BOARD.

Flour quiet and steady. We quote: Fancy $5 25@5 50; choice $4 95@5 10; family $4 60@4 85; xxx $4 20@4 50; xx $3 65@3 90; x $3 25@3 50; superfine $3@3 15; fine $2 60@2 85.

Wheat—Irregular, but the feeling was weak as a rule and tendency downward. Grades were slow, with millers the chief buyers, a little No. 4 going to shippers. New No. 1 red sold steadily at $1 03½, but No 2 red declined to $1 01⅛@1 01⅛, and not salable at above $1 01⅛ at close; No. 3 red firmer at 93 and No. 4 weaker at 88; for rejected 82 bid. Old No. 2 red salable at $1 02½, No. 3 red at $100½, No. 4 at 91½, No. 2 Mediterranean sold at $101⅛, and No. 3 do. (higher) at 94½. Speculative entirely out. Futures unsettled, but most sales at declines, and closed slightly below Saturday. February sold at $102⅝ to $102¼; March at $105⅛ to $104⅞; April at $106⅜; May at $108⅛ to 108; for January $101⅛ bid at close.

Corn—A somewhat weaker tone was manifest, though really only in the speculative grade for cash and future. Grade No. 2 mixed went to shorts, and sold steadily early at 41½, but later went down to 41⅞; No. 2 white mixed slower at 42 and dull; rejected do had 41 bid; rejected under a pressing order demand advanced sharply from 37 to 38¼ in St. Louis, but sold at close at 37½. Futures weak and declined, closing ⅛@¼ below Saturday, except January, which was only ⅛ off. January sold at 41⅛ to 41⅞; February at 38⅞ to 38⅛; March at 38⅞ to 38⅛; April at 39⅛ to 39; May at 40⅛ to 40⅛; for June 40⅞@⅛ bid.

Oats—The continued scarcity upholds prices stiffly for cash, while the eagerness shown by buyers advanced No. 2 to 32⅞c, at which, however, there were pretty free sellers; for No. 2 white 33 was bid, none offered; rejected and neglected. Futures lower and weak, March selling at 33@⅛ to 33⅛, closing at 33⅛@¼; May at 35¼ to 35; bids of 32⅞@33 for February, 31 for April.

Barley—Held firmly, but little demand. We quote: Rejected 40@50c; No. 3 60@70c; prime 75@85c; choice 90@95c; fancy $1@1 05; Canada $1@1 25.

Rye dull, with indifferent buyers of No. 2 at 86, but held stiffly at 88; rejected neglected.

Hay—Receipts large and market lower, but nominal free at the slight decline. We quote: Prairie, $9@12; mixed, $12 50@13; prime timothy, $14 50@15; choice, do, $15 50; fancy do, $17.

Prime steam lard held at 9, bid 8.90; leaf sold at 7.10. Dry salt loose clear ribs sold at 6.90; generally held at $4 35 for shoulders; 6.90 for clear ribs 7.15 for short clear. Bacon clear ribs brought 7.70@7.70⅞, short clear 7⅞. Tallow 5¼@⅜, according to quality. Breakfast bacon 9@10c. Grease, 4@4½c for brown, 4¾@5c for yellow, 5¾@6c for white. CATTLE—There was not a very extensive supply this morning nor was the demand very active at the opening, but transfers were effected at prices about steady. And as all the buyers were on the market the feeling grew stronger with every hour. One lot of shipping steers, averaging 1,415 lbs, sold for $5 25 per cwt, and another lot averaging 1,382 lbs for $5 15. Butcher cattle were in fair demand and selling very well, $4 20 per cwt being paid for a mixed lot averaging 1,026 lbs per head. All the offerings will sell, and the pens be cleared early, the market closing firm.

HOGS—There was a very active hog market this morning. The new was fairly good and buyers were eager to purchase at an advance. Packers were operating but little, shippers taking all the offerings, and eager to get them. All grades of hog were selling from 5@10c higher than on Saturday and the boom bids fair to continue. We quote choice Yorkers at $4 85 to $5; heavy shipping hogs at $5 00 to $5 30; mixed packing at $4 90 to $5 10; and choice heavy at $5 10 to $5 30. Everything offered will sell the market closing strong.

A RECEIVER REFUSED.

Judge Boyle Denies the Application in the Case of the Butchers' and Drovers'.

In the matter of Jacob Bittner's application for the appointment of a receiver of the Butchers' and Drovers' Bank, Judge Boyle this morning rendered an oral decision. The Court fails to find sufficient allegation in the bill to grant the appointment. It does not clearly set forth that the corporation is dissolved. In any case if a temporary receiver were appointed it is not clear that the judgments of judgement creditors who had executions upon the bank property would be disturbed. The court was unable to tell by the plaintiff's bill whether a receiver was asked for the winding up of the corporation or simply a custodian to guard the assets. A question involving the right of a receiver or assignee to recover from the stockholders of a corporation would come up before the general term on Monday next and then the scope of a receiver's duties would be fully ventilated. Meanwhile better reasons must be shown to the court by the creditor petition for a receiver before any relief, temporary or otherwise, could be granted him.

The sale of the property found in the bank safe is advertised for Wednesday, to satisfy judgments, and it does not appear that the courts will interfere with it.

A FINAL HEARING.

The Court Sets a Day to Dispose of the Times Troubles.

The Times matters were again trotted out before Judge Lindley this morning. The reply of Frank J. Bowman to the separate answer of bondholder Buchanan, which alleged conspiracy to wreck the Times, was filed, and the case was dismissed as to the Associated Press. It was stated that the association would duly acknowledge the rights of the purchaser under a receiver's sale to be ordered by the court, and that purchasers would get the franchise.

The answers of all parties being now filed in court, and a motion to dissolve the injunction being entered by the minority interest, Judge Lindley set the case down for hearing tomorrow. It will be the final hearing in this tedious litigation, and a final decision may be looked for next Monday, together with an order of sale.

Finn's Fees.

Judge Lindley passed this morning upon the application in the Biddle-Finn case for the appointment of a receiver to collect the fees and emoluments of ex-Sheriff Finn for the satisfaction of a judgment obtained against him in 1873. The court has refused the application upon the ground that there is no equity in the bill. The allegations of the bill as originally filed were not sufficient to give the Court any jurisdiction in the matter and that since the filing of the original bill the ex-Sheriff had made an assignment of his fees to his bondsmen. Any subsequent amended bill would now come too late. The application for a receiver must be denied.

A HOTEL MYSTERY.

The Curious Actions and Stories of a Party at the Laclede.

Mrs. Binney and Daughter, Fred Warren and Huldah Warren.

A Denver and Rio Grande Contractor and a French Heiress.

Habitues of the Laclede have been speculating a good deal for three or four days past on the curious conduct of some people who have came in about the middle of last week, and who have managed to mix themselves up in such a manner that nobody knows who is who or what is what. The pioneer of the crowd was O. E. French, who gave out his business as that of a contractor on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. He had come on here to get laborers. When he registered he notified the clerk that there were tow ladies in the parlor who wanted a room. As to who they were or what they were he could give no information. They asked him to tell the clerk of their wishes. The clerk waited on the new comers, and, as the result, they registered as Mrs. Binney and daughter. One was middle-aged and the other nineteen or twenty. Both were self-possessed and evidently able to take care of themselves.

So far there was nothing out of the way, but on Friday the elder woman put in an appearance at the Union Depot and sought the assistance of an officer stationed there to make the younger woman, who she said had taken her pocket-book and contents, give up the checks to the baggage. Then the relationship of mother and daughter was repudiated and the younger was only recognized as a traveling companion. Several visits were made to the depot and once Mrs. Binney went to the Four Courts. Capt. McDonough heard her story and refused to interfere, telling her to go up stairs and swear out a warrant. This she showed great reluctance to do, saying she did not want the other arrested, but simply frightened into restoring the pocket-book and contents. The accused woman also visited the depot several times and on Sunday the two came in contact there and the depot police were witnesses to a very stormy scene. The alleged "daughter" snapped her finger in Mrs. Binney's face and dared her to attempt an arrest at the risk of having made public all that was going on, the design on French, and so forth. The threat caused the elder to weaken and she wanted to compromise. The police, however, had heard enough to satisfy themselves that there was something curious going on under cover and they invited the young woman to go to the Four Courts. She went protesting loudly. When the chief had heard her story he at once turned her loose. She gave her name as Huldah Warren and said she had been traveling with Mrs. Binney; that they had an heiress with them who paid the bills. They had come from Pueblo and had formed the acquaintance of French on the way up. She, Huldah, was tired of the crowd and wanted to get away and return to her home in Moorhead, Minnesota.

After Huldah was set at liberty she and Mrs. Binney arranged a compromise by which the checks were given up and Huldah retained enough money to take her home, for which destination she left last night.

Mrs. Binney was seen at the Laclede this morning and proved quite voluble. Her story is that she is traveling with an heiress, whose name is Nettie D. Bebian; that the latter pays all the expenses; that Huldah Warren was of the party up to last night. According to Mrs. Binney Miss Bebian is the daughter of a French banker, having been born in Havre, France. Her people came to this country years ago and lived in Wisconsin. The father died leaving quite a fortune to this girl, who, by the way, Mrs. Birney says, French is greatly interested in. The girl's guardian placed her at school in Appleton, Wis., but a man named McLaughlin, who has a family in Fargo, took her away from the academy and brought her to Muller's Station, near the Wisconsin and Minnesota line, where Mrs. Binney was living. She took the girl into the family and gave her home. There Nettie's cousin, a young man named Fred Warren, found her and informed the guardian. The latter found a lover for the girl and wanted her to marry.

Since then, according to Mrs. Binney Nettie D. Bebian has been on the wing, and much of the time she has been with her helping her spend her money and have a good time. McLaughlin paid the expenses of a trip to New York at one time when Nettie was too near Fargo. Fred Warren, the cousin, turned traveling companion some of the time and was in the city last week. There was, however, something between him and Huldah Warren which led to a break-up, and Fred left hastily for San Francisco, and Huldah went North. According to Mrs. Binney, the heiress still has plenty of money. The stories told of their travels are wonderfully romantic. At one time, to get out of the way of the guardian, the girl donned male attire and traveled in that. The present purpose is to go to New Orleans, and Mrs. Binney thinks French will also go down there with them to see the sights and get laborers for the Rio Grand Railroad.

McLaughlin dropped out of this drama in real life some time ago.

Space would fail to give the whole of Mrs. Binney's story. The rest is very much of a piece with that given above. Probably the reader will feel slightly mystified after reading it. The reporter did after hearing it. Even those wonderfully clever fellows, the hotel clerks, shake their heads and confess that they havn't been able to "size up" the queer crowd.

Representatives will be in attendance from all subordinate groves in the State.

A prominent Land League has been formed here, known as the Carondelet, South St. Louis Land League, the object being to "assist the brethren in Ireland." Meetings will be held once a month at Gillick's Hall. Peter O'Brien is president, Michael Murray treasurer, with quite a long list of vice-presidents.

Henry Mercer spent Sunday in the holdover, and formed divers and sundry good resolutions in regard to keno in the future. Saturday morning Judge Spies was appealed to for a reduction of the fine of $200, which he had imposed upon Mercer the day before. He refused then to do it, stating as his reason that he had no right to do this after adjournment of the court when the fine was imposed. He probably attended church yesterday, and listened to a sermon in which justice was tempered with mercy, for this morning his heart was softened and he reduced the fine to $100 and costs, total $106, which was handed over in double quick time, and Mercer walked out a free man. James Miller, the colored waiter of the establishment, is not in luck that way, for he is pounding rock at fifty cents a day to pay his full fine of $200. This may be law but it hardly appears to be justice, in view of the position he held. The man Dennis, who was arrested Saturday night charged with being door-keeper, was liberated this morning, there being no proof against him.

A PRIEST'S PETITION.

Father O'Reilly Wants $50,000 for Alleged Libel.

A libel suit for $50,000 damages has been filed against the publishers of the Globe-Democrat by Father O'Reilly, of Carondelet. The reverend gentleman complains of a column article published in that newspaper with the following caption: "Priest vs. police. The quarrel between Father O'Reilly and the peace-guardians. How the reverend gentleman evaded arrest. A good story of his qualities as a pugilist." Father O'Reilly alleges the article treated of him as a pugilist and spoke of his fighting qualities with the malicious intent of injuring him as a priest of the Catholic Church. The trouble arose from a snow-balling contest in which the youth of Carondelet engaged a short time since.

Cote Brilliante Improvements.

The Cote Brilliante people are calling for more improvements. Satisfied with the arrangement, the Citizens Railway Company propose to convey passengers from Fourth street to Rinkle's for a single fare. The suburban people want water. A main has been laid from Grand avenue to Good avenue and the prayer now is to continue it at least to the Christian Brother's College opposite the Jockey Club grounds.

Scott, the agitator of suburban improvements, is bewailing the fact that Col. Armstrong retires from the police-board, leaving nothing done about the Cote Brilliante police station. A lot was bought and given to the department by the citizens, and it was supposed a station-house would be erected last season. Thus far, however, the lot remains untouched. Scott says there ought to have been "an emergency clause" in the deed.

The Carondelet Elevator.

Mr. George Reader, the architect of the Missouri Pacific Elevator exhibited a side elevation of the new structure on 'Change today. The building is situated in Carondelet and is already half finished. The most noticeable feature in the new structure is the device for loading barges which is so constructed that it will load at the rate of two thousand bushels of grain a minute. There are six chutes, which discharge wheat into the barges simultaneously, and only six men are required to keep the cargo evenly distributed and load in the hold, instead of thirty or forty as at present. The plans were examined with much interest by the river and grain men on 'Change.

Another Assignment.

An assignment for the benefit of the creditors was filed this morning by Clymer's Preserving Company, J. L. & H. L. Clymer, fruit and butter merchants, 1013 and 1015 Broadway. The deed is drawn in favor of John C. Bensich and it bears the signatures of John L. Clymer, Mary Clymer, Henry Telker and Henry Clymer. The value of the property assigned is given as follows: Machinery, boiler, engine, tanks, office fixtures, horses and wagons, $3,400; stock of merchandise in factory, $9,571; open accounts, $1,298; total of assets, $14,270 27; liabilities, $31,283 77.

Queer Hours.

BERNHARDT.

The French Actress Fatigued—"Frou-Frou" Her Opening Play.

Under her physician's orders the Bernhardt keeps her bed all day to-day. She is very much fatigued with her recent travel and hard work in Chicago, and the consequence is that she is thoroughly used up. The Lindell Hotel is full of French looking people and the Gallic language seems to be the chief medium of conversation through the hostelry. Messrs. Jarrett and Abbey spent the morning at the theater sorting out Miss Bernhardt's mail, much of which bore St. Louis post marks. To-night she plays which will be presented for the opening and closing performances. It is the only serious drama of MM. Henri Meilhac and Ludovic Halevy, authors of the libretti of "Belle Helene," "Grand Duchess," "Perichole," etc. Mdlle. Aimee Desclee created the part. The play was first produced October 30, 1869, at the Gymnase, Paris. The heroine is Gilberte, the gay and frivolous daughter of Brigard, a thorough Bohemian. She is called Frou-Frou—the noise made by the rustling of silks—because she is frou-frou personified. She has two lovers—Count Poul de Valreas and Henry de Sartorys. The latter, who is beloved by her sister, she marries. After marriage she is the same giddy, frivolous, careless girl as before, neglects her husband and child, until recalling hdr sister Louise's love for Sartorys, she fancies the latter returns the affection, and wild wild with jealousy, Gilberte elopes with Valreas. De Sartorys follows them to Geneva, dangerously wounds Valreas in a duel and takes Gilberte back to his home and heart fully forgiven; but the death shadow is upon her, and in the last moments she is Frou-Frou still, her dying words being a clear index to her character: "Quand je serai morte, il foudra me faire belle comme je petails autrefois——cette robe noire——non——Tu prendras parmi mes robes de bal——une robe blanche——la jupe est tout couvette de petites roses——C'est cella-la que je veux——et veus verrez comme je serai jolie et comme une fois encore vous retouverrez Frou-Frou!"

"FROU-FROU,"

THE UNITED STATES COURT.

It Will Not Interfere With the Work of the St. Louis Mutual Receiver.

Judge Treat rendered a decision this morning in the case of Hamilton et al vs. Chouteau et al. The defendants were respectively stockholders in the St. Louis Mutual Life Insurance Company. It is alleged that all the assets of the company were with their connivance transferred to the Mound City Mutual Company of whose shares of stock they were to receive a like number to those held in the St. Louis Mutual subject to be paid at par by the Mound City; that the shares were paid off and the defendants became the respective beneficiaries. Practically, says the Court, the insolvent St. Louis Mutual through the fraud charged secured to these conniving stockholders full pay at par for their worthless stock out of the assets which should have been devoted to the payment of its debts. Under sufficient averments equity would lay its hands upon funds thus fraudulently acquired and apply them for the benefit of honest creditors. But it is averred that the St. Louis Mutual is now and has been for years in the hands of a competent receiver, who is collecting and administering the assets for the benefit of creditors. In that case, why should this court undertake to collect and administer a fragment of the assets?

Will a Chancery Court split assets to the extent of upholding as many suits as there may be creditors or items of assets? It would indefinitely create a multiplicity of suits. The Court would be compelled to bring in all the parties and take custody of the assets in order that each creditor might receive his pro rata. The bill is fatally defective and the demurrer is sustained.

RECLAIMING GOODS.

Judge Treat Decides a Legal Knot Concerning Attachment.

Judge Treat rendered a decision to-day in the case of Kelley et al. vs. Denning et al., giving judgment for the plaintiff for nomina damages and costs. This was a case in which one Warriner through fraudulent representations caused plaintiffs to ship to him certain goods payable in cash on delivery. The property was shipped by rail and Warriner having in the meantime absconded it was placed in the railway storehouse subject to order. Some creditors of Warriner caused the same to be seized by attachment and the plaintiffs caused the same to be replevined out of the possession of the attaching creditors. Where property acquired by fraud has passed to innocent purchasers from vendee for value after delivery to the vendee, the vendor can not, as between himself and said purchasers, reclaim the same. Until the vendee had an acquired right in the property irrespective of the vendor, his creditors could not defeat the vendor's demand.

Died in the Cars.

This morning Dr. Frank held an inquest on the body of William G. Tonn, Register of Lands, of Wyoming Territory, who was found dead in his berth in a Pullman palace car on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railroad. The deceased was a lawyer and lived at Evanston, Wyoming Territory. He boarded the car at Council Bluffs, and stated that he was going to Hot Springs, Ark., as he was suffering greatly from asthma. About 6:30 this morning, Mr. J. D. Mullaney, the conductor found Tonn dead in his berth.

A PRESIDENT'S KNOWLEDGE.

The United States Court Passes on an Important Note Claim.

The United States Court to-day overruled the motion for judgment in the case of Lancaster vs. Collins. The defendant in this suit executed a note to the order of the Big Muddy Iron Company for $10,000, on which there were successive endorsements. The plaintiff was one of the endorsers before maturity. The innocent holder of the note brought suit and obtained judgment against the defendant including the indorsers, and the plaintiff who paid one-half of the amount of the judgment now brings suit to recover of the maker what was paid. The plaintiff was president of the Big Muddy Iron Company and solicited the defendant to subscribe to the shares of capital stock. He was the fourth endorser with full knowledge of the facts of the transaction leading to the note, and the note had been negotiated with his knowledge. He knew that the note was to be renewed and that the obligation of the maker was to cease on notice given and the shares of stock in his hands were to be forfeited. There can be no recovery says Judge Treat. The plaintiff can not sever his knowledge as president from his private knowledge of what he did as president.

Westford Burgess, a youth of about 18 or 20, broke jail a few days ago at Pickneyville. He is described as being about 5 feet 10 inches in height, light complexion and weighing about 140 pounds. A reward of $25 is offered by Thos. Penwarden, the Sheriff of Perry county, for his re-arrest.

Justice Graney, secretary of the board of trustees of St. Patrick's Church, at the meeting of that body submitted his annual report of the financial condition of the church for 1880. During the year just ended the receipts amounted to $6,751 25 and the expeditures to $6,750 13, leaving a balance of $1 12 in the treasury.

Marcus A. Wolff, the real estate agent of St. Louis, left his brown mare and leather top buggy standing in front of a friend's, to whom he was paying a visit. When he returned, neither horse nor buggy was to be found. The missing property was traced as far as the bridge. The police on this side have been notified, and are on the lookout for the property and the thief.

The funeral of Mrs. Martin Doyle of the Second Ward took place from her family residence on Fourth, near Broadway yesterday evening, to St. Patrick's Church, thence to St. Henry's Cemetery. Mrs. Doyle's death was very sudden; on Friday morning she was seized with a congestive chill and at 8 o'clock she took another. Dr. O'Reilly, of St. Louis, was immediately summoned, but could do nothing to alleviate her suffering. Saturday morning she quietly and peacefully breathed her last, after receiving the last sacraments of the church.

The funeral of Mrs. Ellen E. Kessler, wife of J. Kessler, Esq., of North Ninth street, was solemnized at St. Michael's Church yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended by sorrowing friends. The appointments were of the most perfect characters, and all the details reflected great credit on Mr. Kron, the gentleman in charge of the funeral.

Fined Heavily.

John Shannon, J. C. Welsh and Charles St. John, were up before Judge Jecko this morning charged with disturbing the peace. From the evidence it would appear that the defendants started out yesterday in the vicinity of Compton Hill to have some fun and it would further appear that they had that same and an abundance thereof. The facts in the case were dead against them. The officer testifying that they had visited several saloons and ordered beverages for which they refused to pay, concluding each visit with a row. The police arrived in time to take the men in charge and this morning Shannon was fined $25, Welsh $70 and St. John $10, and each costs.

THE VERDICT OF THE PEOPLE
Generally a Just One.

We have tendered our wares to the people of St. Louis. They have bought and worn an immense quantity of our garments, and they render us the unqualified praise of saying that, by all odds, the clothing we furnish them is the best ever offered in this market. Nothing but the choicest fabrics, made up in the most artistic manner, will satisfy us, and our Motto shall continue to be, as it has been,

"HE IS MY SON."

An Old Father's Painful Admission in a Police Court.

No. 16, William Guth," called out Deputy-Marshal Coffey in the First-District Police Court this morning. In answer to the above a sallow boy of about eighteen years stepped from the prisoners' dock and approached the bar when Clerk Thomas read to him a charge of disturbing the peace by assaulting, fighting and striking. He pleaded not guilty and sat down in the chair opposite Col. Claiborne, who was prosecuting. When the witnesses were called an old man arose from the audience room and walked into the area near the Judge's desk, when he was sworn.

"What is your name?" asked Col. Claiborne.

"Michael Schmall," answered the man. I cannot speak English well. He," pointing to the prisoner, "wanted bread and I told him to go to work and earn bread, and for this he struck me in the face."

"Do you know the defendant?" asked Col. Claiborne.

The old man hesitated and after a short delay said "yes." The tears came to his eyes and as he looked down to where the prisoner sat, he added in a quivering voice "he is my son." In answer to the questions asked he said his son had not worked for two years, and as he was a poor man he was unable to support him. When he asked him to go and get work he received a blow for his good advice. "You may go down," said Judge Jecko. "I want to tell you," the old man continued, "that he says he will kill me when he gets out of the Work-house." The boy was sent down for two months.
